STATE FINALLY TAKES LIQUOR RATION STEPS

House-Approved Bill To Limit Purchases Goes To Senate For Final Action.

PUTS BLAME ON BRICKER

Liquor Maker Charges Governor Ignored Situation; Failed State's Business.

By action taken yesterday in the house of representatives at Columbus the muddled Ohio liquor situation had moved a step nearer to what was always the obvious solution—rationing. The house passed a bill giving the state liquor director, Don A. Sher, the power to ration liquor. The vote was 110 to 15. The measure now goes to the senate. During house debate on the measure, the blame for the shortage was laid in the lap of Governor John W. Bricker, who has maintained an eloquent silence on the question of liquor rationing and shortage itself.

That charge was made by A. Lee Fair, Millersburg, Democratic representative from Holmes county. Fair charged that Bricker had gone about the state bragging about the surplus in the state treasury, when it might better have been paying attention to the state's business and could have invested some of the surplus in liquor—which is one of the state's best sources of revenue.

(Actually, Bricker hasn't agitated about the surplus—he's steadily understated it, while regularly boosting the cost state government. Only early in the year was it definitely established that the state had a surplus of more than 40 million dollars.)

Introduced by Representative Ward Metzger of Cleveland, the house-approved bill, passed after a debate that was marked alternately by comedy and politeness, says the liquor director "may" ration Ohio's diminishing supply of liquor. As originally written, the bill of rationing mandatory. But amendment left rationing to discretion of the director. Today, dispatches from Columbus said, Gov. Bricker raised Fisher from the position of acting director of the liquor department to the status of full director. "We think Fisher is doing a good job in difficult circumstances and this will give him more authority," Don C. Power, the governor's secretary, said. Fisher became acting director by this year when Jacob B. Bivler was given leave of absence to accept an army commission shortly before he left office. Power stated that liquor rationing continued on Page 4, Col. 6.

BACKS TAX

Administration Favors Plan To Withhold Part of Pay.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Secretary of Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., today said the administration is 100 per cent behind the new withholding income tax approved by the house ways and means committee. Asked at a press conference the committee bill was satisfactory to him, Morgenthau replied: "The answer is 'yes.' The administration is behind the committee bill 100 per cent." He says the Ways and Means committee calls for a 20 per cent withholding tax on salaries and earnings beginning July 1. The withholding tax would include both a victory tax and the income

RITUAL SET

Fun Requiem Mass To Be Held For British Cardinal.

LONDON—(AP)—A solemn requiem mass will be held Tuesday for the late Arthur Cardinal Hinsley, who died yesterday after a week's illness, it was announced today. Members of his Westminster archdiocese were expected to meet at the funeral to elect a vicar general pending the Vatican's nomination of a successor.

STILL CLOSED

10 Pupils Still Out In Dayton School Dispute.

DAYTON—(AP)—Dayton's 49 schools remained closed today, little indication being given that the strike would be reached by the end of the week. The school board today returned to the return of 30,000 students, 1,100 teachers to their classes.

As County Red Cross Supplies Food for Troop Train

Broad Revision Predicted For Measure to Draft Labor

(By Associated Press) WASHINGTON—Broad revision of legislation to draft civilians for war industry appeared imminent today to assure more women workers in the older age group and also to soothe opposition of organized labor. As congressional efforts to deal with growing manpower problems led to the house a senate-approved bill deferring essential farm workers from hearing arms sponsors of the Austin-Wadsworth national service proposal indicated a general overhauling in prospect. Meanwhile talk of limiting the size of the armed forces was renewed by Senator Nye (R-N.D.) who said he and two other colleagues would offer legislation to that end soon. "The war department is attempting to raise a force of more than 8,000,000 including the army air force, but I personally believe a figure of around 5,000,000 men would be ample to do the job," Nye said. After William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, testified at a senate military committee hearing the Austin-Wadsworth bill would impose "involuntary servitude" on American workers, Senator Austin (R-Vt.), co-writer of the measure, said the labor chairman will be asked to aid in rewriting some of the draft provisions. "The senate passed the measure virtually freezing remaining agricultural workers on the farms 30 to 24 yesterday, despite war department objections to blanket farm delinquents and claims the armed forces would be deprived of needed potential soldiers, Sen. Robert A. Taft voted for it and (Continued on Page 20, Col. 4)

SHOOS 'DUCKS'

Rep. Brown Hits Naming of Ex-Solons to Key Jobs.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Labeling Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown "the chief gander" among farm ducks, Rep. Clarence J. Brown, Blanchester, Ohio, Republican, asked congress yesterday to outlaw appointment of its defeated members to federal jobs until two years after their terms expire. The Ohio congressman told the house he considered such appointments undemocratic and un-American and offered a bill (H.R. 1168) that would prohibit naming defeated legislators to any federal post except the supreme court and cabinet until two years after their elective service ended. He said he thought "when the people speak x x x through the authority of the ballot and say they no longer want a man to serve them in public office, then that gentleman should gracefully retire x x x."

Dim-Out at 9 Tonight Takes In All of City, Madison Twp

At the request of civilian defense protective units in the district, all of Madison township will be included in tonight's city-wide dim-out, Police Captain Jesse J. Schwab, defense commander, announced today. Wardens and police auxiliaries in the Madison area will report to their respective sector posts when the warning sirens sound at 9 p. m., and patrol their areas until the all-clear signal at 9:20 p. m. Incident reports will be made to sector chiefs who in turn will report to Captain Schwab. In Mansfield, officials were confident of 100 per cent compliance with dim-out regulations after the ironing out of faults revealed in last week's four sectional dim-outs. Non-war factories or other structures must be entirely dimmed out by the shutting off of lights or the use of black-out curtains, Schwab said. Violations requiring special attention reported last week have been corrected, wardens and officers of the protective units say. Auxiliary police will report at city police headquarters at 7:30 (Continued on Page 4, Col. 4)

SPEED NEEDED, THEY GAVE IT

Red Cross Canteen Unit and Motor Corps Respond To Troop Train Call.

By MARY DAVIDSON "A troop train's stopping in Mansfield in 45 minutes. The men are hungry. Can you feed them?" This was the message received by the Richmond County Red Cross yesterday. It came at 1:30 p. m. The answer was a quick "yes" and 30 minutes later a corps of 15 women reported at Union Station with big baskets and canteens of food. They were Red Cross canteen and motor corps workers reporting. Women left their jobs in business offices, others took off their aprons and put household duties aside to meet the first big emergency call made on the Red Cross canteen motor corps units. In half an hour's time the two units had changed into official uniforms, gathered up sandwiches, doughnuts and coffee sufficient to feed 150 men and were on hand with time to spare before the train arrived. As the train came to a stop on the siding, Sgt. William Skelton stepped off and took charge of (Continued on Page 4, Col. 2)

OFFERS PRAISE

Curtin Calls Gen. MacArthur 'Inspiring Force.'

NEW YORK (AP)—High tribute was paid to Gen. Douglas MacArthur by Prime Minister John Curtin today before the Australian house of representatives. A British broadcast, recorded by CBS, quoted Curtin as saying, "Gen. MacArthur is not only a great organizer against the common enemy but has become an inspiring force to this country."

Coast Guard Cutter Chases Five Subs, Rams and Sinks 6th

(By United Press) WASHINGTON—This is the story of the coast guard cutter Campbell that signed sub and sank same.

It is the story of a ship, dedicated in peace to the saving of life at sea, holding at bay a wolf pack of German submarines on the scent of a convoy "kill." In 12 danger-packed hours in the North Atlantic about three weeks ago, the Campbell stored up enough glory for the lifetime of any ship. During that half-day's period, the Campbell rammed and sank a large German submarine and dropped a depth-charge barrage that forced five other submarines to seek the refuge of the deep. The story of the Campbell's adventures begins with her assignment to leave a main convoy (Continued on Page 4, Col. 5)

CUFF COMEBACK?

Clothing Industry Sees Return of Trouser 'Bottoms.'

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Men's trouser cuffs may stage a comeback. Informed sources today conceded that sentiment within the men's clothing industry for restoration of the ill-fated cuffs is beginning to seep into the thinking of WPA officials. Cuffs were banned nearly a year ago to save enough wool cloth to manufacture at least 300,000 suits. Over the intervening months, however, the country's wool situation has been improving steadily with large imports from Australia. The lake was dragged for two days before the body was located. Search for the missing man who was found in 32 feet of water, 500 feet out in the lake from his home, Sheriff H. R. Weiss of Holmes county said. More than 60 persons used 10 boats during the search, dragging the lake with hooks and barbed wire, the sheriff said. (Continued on Page 4, Col. 2)

Lakeville Man, Missing 24 Days, Found In Lake

LAKEVILLE—The body of Verde Rush, 49, who had been missing from his home in Lakeville for 24 days, was recovered Wednesday about 7:30 p. m. from Lake O'Leary by Holmes county authorities and neighbors of the missing man. Rush was a veteran of the first World war. The lake was dragged for two days before the body was located. Search for the missing man who was found in 32 feet of water, 500 feet out in the lake from his home, Sheriff H. R. Weiss of Holmes county said. More than 60 persons used 10 boats during the search, dragging the lake with hooks and barbed wire, the sheriff said. (Continued on Page 4, Col. 2)

BATTLE CRIME

New York Police Report Eighth Street Attack In Week.

NEW YORK—(AP)—The eighth assault since Sunday in sporadic outbreaks of street crimes throughout the city was reported today by police who said 20 Negro youths surrounded a white boy, taunted and beat him. The police department, in an effort to halt night crimes of violence on the city's dimmed-out streets, augmented patrols in Harlem and part of Washington Heights as well as in Central park. FIRE HITS REFINERY TULSA, Okla. (AP)—Federal Bureau of Investigation agents sought today to determine the origin of a fire which caused an estimated $100,000 damage at the West Tulsa refinery of the Mid-Continent Petroleum company.

HUNT GIRL, 11

Police Seek Ohio Child Who Disappeared Tuesday.

CINCINNATI—(AP)—Police of Ohio and Kentucky were asked today to search for 11-year-old Ruth Marcum, missing from her hilltop home since Tuesday morning, while in Cincinnati, Cincinnati authorities followed meager clues suggesting that she may have been a victim of violence.

Climax 30-Mile Drive; British Storm Mareth

U. S. Troops Pursue Axis Garrison on Road Toward Gabes as Gen. Patton Takes Command of Yanks; Huge Tank Battle Rages In Donets.

(By Associated Press) Allied headquarters announced today American troops had recaptured the strategic German-held air base at Gafsa in central Tunisia, climaxing a 30-mile drive, while on the southern front a Berlin broadcast said Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's British Eighth army was storming the Mareth line with four tank and infantry divisions. A bulletin from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters said Allied positions were improved in the northern sector of the 60-mile-long Mareth line front "both during the nights of March 16 and 17 and during yesterday."

This was the first authoritative Allied statement tending to confirm German reports the British Eighth army had launched a grand assault against the "little Maginot" defense line in southern Tunisia. "In the south, our patrols were active, inflicting losses on the enemy," the war bulletin said. An Allied communique reported American troops encountered little opposition in their recapture of Gafsa.

Frontline dispatches said U. S. troops, supported by mobile French detachments, were pursuing the Axis garrison of Gafsa toward El Guefhar, 12 miles away, on a road leading to the Gulf of Gabes and the Mareth line. Hundreds of mines and booby traps hampered the advance, but Allied planes bombed and shot up the fleeing Germans, destroyed trucks and silenced gun positions. A British broadcast said Lieut. Gen. K. A. N. Anderson's First army troops struck out in two counter-attacks in the northern sector yesterday, making "some headway" against Col. Gen. Jurgen von Arnim's forces which had overrun French positions north of Tamara.

Allied headquarters still maintained silence on the scope of operations against the Mareth line, but observers read signs of a widening Allied offensive as Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower installed Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, tank specialist, as commander of U. S. troops in western Tunisia. General Patton, nicknamed "Blood and Guts," is known as one of the most offensive-minded generals of the army. A Berlin broadcast asserted Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's forces entrenched in the pillbox-studded Mareth works had been able to hold their forward lines amid heavy fighting. German military quarters, however, forecast "an increase and continuation of the British attacks," which Berlin said were launched at 10:30 o'clock Tuesday night.

The German radio reported that in addition to the four-division assault on the northern sector, strong British reinforcements were pouring around the Nazi right flank in the vicinity of Ksar Rhilane, 45 miles behind the southern anchor of the Mareth fortifications. "It is presumed that this group has been ordered to operate against the deep flank of the Mareth line simultaneously with troops in western Tunisia. (Continued on Page 4, Col. 1)

ON THE SCENE: Eyewitness Watches Yanks Retake Gafsa

(By PHIL AULT (UP Staff Correspondent)) ADVANCED AMERICAN HEADQUARTERS IN CENTRAL TUNISIA, March 17—(Delayed)—Our infantry rolled into Gafsa at noon today and tonight we are only a little more than 100 miles away from a juncture with the British Eighth army.

Our patrols are reporting now that the Germans are digging in on a rocky, barren mountain around the El Guefhar Pass, 14 miles to the southeast on the road to Gabes. It looks as though they are going to put up a fight there, and if they are driven from that position they probably will fall back to another mountain position closer to Gabes and try to prevent a juncture with the Eighth army.

The show started at 7:30 o'clock this morning. Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., ordered an artillery barrage and American 105s and 155s opened up on the enemy's defense perimeter. An oasis on the far side of the town then got a heavy pounding. At 9:15 a. m., there was a roar overhead. A formation of Billy Mitchell bombers went flying up behind clearing skies to bomb the Germans and soften them up for the advance. At 10 a. m., came the command, "infantry forward!" and the attack of Gafsa started. During the night combat teams had been slipped in by truck to assault positions west, north and northeast of the town.

It was comparatively easy going for the infantry. The German resistance came mostly from machine guns and small arms, and it soon became apparent that the enemy withdrawal had started about 9:15 a. m., even before the Mitchell's flew into attack. Mines and booby traps held up (Continued on Page 4, Col. 7)

ALL-OUT Nazi U-Boats Press Greatest Offensive Since 1917

(By United Press) LONDON—Indications multiplied today that Germany is now pushing her greatest submarine offensive since the spring of 1917 in an effort to delay the impending Anglo-American invasion of Europe until her armies can make a final attempt to crush Russia. At least 14 submarines were sighted on the surface and many others were known to have been beneath the surface during a three-day running attack on an Allied convoy in the North Atlantic last month, the British admiralty revealed. Three of the U-boats were destroyed and many others damaged seriously by Allied warships and planes, the admiralty said, but it acknowledged that the convoy "throughout the battle suffered loss."

Another wolf-pack of at least six submarines was reported by the U. S. navy department in Washington to have been laying in wait for another Allied convoy in the North Atlantic last month. The 2,216-ton coast guard cutter Campbell drove off five of the submarines and rammed and sank the sixth in a 12-hour duel, the navy said. It did not reveal whether the convoy which the Campbell was escorting suffered loss. (Continued on Page 4, Col. 3)

Uses Scooter to Visit Tribes In Wilds of Africa

PANDORA, O., (JNS)—How a woman missionary used a modern motor scooter to carry the Gospel to the heathen tribes of West Africa was revealed in a letter recently received in this Putnam county village.

The letter was sent from Kwoi via Kafauchant, Nigeria, West Africa, by Miss Mary Haas of the Sudan Interior Mission to her parents living in Pandora.

Miss Haas told of a trip of 200 miles into the interior which took three gallons of gasoline on a visit to seven tribes. One tribe lived in a forest of tall mahogany trees in huts built so close together that one had to "walk sideways" to pass between them. The ebony natives wear no clothing—not even a leaf—she related.

She told of "scooting" down a dry season motor road through grass 10 feet high. A herd of elephants lived nearby and one could see where they had passed by the flattened grass. They eat nuts from palm trees and if the nuts are too high, push the trees over to get them.

In contrast to the northern territories of the "Dark Continent," where great guns roar in the present war of civilization, Miss Haas found a strange peace and quiet among the primitive people in an ignorant land, according to her letter.

THEATERS

Film Held Over.

"Immortal Sergeant," starring Henry Fonda and Maureen O'Hara, is being held over until Saturday at the Ohio, following cancellation of "Reveille With Beverly," which was previously scheduled. "Immortal Sergeant" is the story of desert warfare which led to a British victory in Libya. It shows ordinary men growing to the stature of heroes under a terrible strain.

Olympic Champ.

Bruce Bennett, who plays the leading role in Columbia's "Underground Agent," now showing at the Madison, won fame in another field before becoming a movie star. Under the name of Herman Brix, Bennett was one of the foremost Olympic champions in 1928 and was an outstanding football star. "When Johnny Comes Marching Home Again," co-feature, stars Donald O'Connor, Gloria Jean, Allan Jones, Jane Frazee and Peggy Ryan.

Amherston Mansion.

It required 9,000 separate articles to furnish the interior of the palatial Amherston mansion, a mid-west place of the 1900 period, which is the background for most of the action in RKO's "The Magnificent Ambersons," opening today at the Park. The picture was produced and directed by Orson Welles and was taken from the prize-winning novel by Booth Tarkington. Jean Parker, Ricardo Cortez team up in the other attraction, "Tomorrow We Live," Mitchell, Cesar Romero, and

Sport Podge

Unbeaten Club Boasts Great Cage Record.

By HAROLD LISK
COLUMBUS (AP)—A tall, high-scoring, undefeated quintet which on only five occasions has failed to defeat its foe by at least 10 points will be Martins Ferry, Ohio, in the state Class A high school crown in regional play at Zanesville Friday.

The Purple Riders are the highest scoring outfit among the 16 class A combines competing in what in peace time would be the Mammoth State cage tourney.

Out to regain the Ohio crown which it held in 1941, the Ferrians have tallied 1553 points, an average of 61.4 per game. Although reportedly not quite as fast or as clever as their colorful predecessors of two seasons ago, the current Purple powerhouse has much more height and reserve strength.

Three members of the Rider starting five are over the six-foot mark. Center Alex Groza, brother of Ohio State's Frosh place-kicker, Sena State, towers six feet four inches and weighs 245 pounds. Eddie Sterling, the best set shot ever to perform for Ferry, goes six-foot one-inch and guard Nick Vrotsos is six foot two.

The other starters are Captain Bill Young, who was a sophomore regular at guard with the '41 championship team, and forward Lou "Bum" Domyan, who is anything but "bum" what his nickname would imply.

Sterling is the club's leading scorer with 394 points. Groza, an accomplished rebounder, has tallied 333 points and Little Domyan has collected 284. Vrotsos' main forte is defense while Young is deadly accurate on tosses from long range.

Young, Domyan and Sterling are seniors while Vrotsos and Groza are juniors. However, Vrotsos will be 18 in June and may go to the army instead of back to school. Groza is only 16.

The riders also have plenty of height in their second five, every member of the quintet but one standing six feet or over.

Bellure came nearest to ruining Martins Ferry's undefeated season. In an early January fight, the riders scored only a one-point victory over Delaware, but defeated its traditional rival in two subsequent meetings, one during the regular season and one in tourney play.

Stouffville was beaten by only three points once, but on two other occasions fell by nine-point margins. Titonville was licked by only six points in one fray but was drubbed by 21 in another.

Floyd Baker, coach of the Riders, has one of the greatest records of any high school mentor in Ohio. In his five seasons at Martins Ferry the Riders have gained three district and one state championship. They have won 107 games and lost but 18.

Baker coached at Springfield and at Bridgeport before going to Martins Ferry. His last three Bridgeport clubs capped district title seven years. Baker's charges have failed to reach the state tourney only twice.

Too Withnessen, graduates class last week when they got out of one but actually they have found that defense is the best offense. They play a forcing game and keep close to their opponents all over the floor.

Let's contrast record, thus: A speaks for itself. Martins Ferry, 1553 points; Clark, 135; Meriden, 127; Bellare, 131; Martins Ferry, 51; Stouffville, 41; Martins Ferry, 73; East Liverpool, 31.

Another exciting game was witnessed by Indianapolis fans as series "B" between third-place Indianapolis and fourth-place Pittsburgh also got under way with the caps edging out the Hornets, 3-1.

Sheridan, a 19-year-old forward, will be presented tonight in Providence. The Hornets won the opening game in Cleveland, 3-0, Tuesday night.

JOHNNY ALLEN LISTED AS PHILLY HOLDOUT

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP)—Johnny Allen, the pitcher the Phils got from Brooklyn in the deal for Ruben Melton, is a holdout.

"I haven't heard from him since he returned his contract marked unsatisfactory," Manager Bucky Harris said. "Under the circumstances I guess he could be classed as a holdout."

M'Kinney Sets Westie-C Pace

Hits 605 Series and Game Of 231 Pins.

Deacon Has Few Words for Redlegs

Manager Bill McKechnie, No. 1, has much to tell his Redlegs at the Cincinnati camp, Bloomington, Ind. The Reds lost few men to the armed services and should be among the contenders for the National league flag. Only a small squad, 31 players, reported to McKechnie at the Indiana camp.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

VIDES FOOD IR 6 MONTHS

Garden Supplies Fresh tables For 24-Week Period.

MBUS —(P)— Victor H
tension specialist at Ohio university, says properly gardens will supply fresh es for a period of 24 weeks and a surplus which can ed throughout the winter

ables which have relative-t productive seasons in-ellow, green, and leafy es—all good sources of
A, and vitamin C—carry-ach, beets, peppers, cab-colt. Succession plantings
e, spinach, and mustard made so one planting will for food as soon as the planting has been comes points out, thus mak-
ns available all summer

Quick crops such as radishes, green onions, lettuce, mustard, beet greens, Swiss chard, spinach, garden cress, and parsley are ready in six weeks under favorable conditions, although such crops as brussels sprouts, parsnips, squash, onion, tomatoes, and late cabbage require three or more months' growth.

Weather conditions also must be considered in garden planning. Rice warns that beans, corn, to- matoes, peppers, and egg plants require plenty of heat and should not be planted until all danger of frost is past, while vegetables which grow best in cool weather and which may be planted early include lettuce, spinach, mustard, turnips, and Chinese cabbage.

HARVEST PAYS
HOULTON, Me.—(U.S.S.)—Pupils in the Houlton public schools put in the emergency potato harvest on Rice warns that beans, corn, to- matoes, peppers, and egg plants require plenty of heat and should not be planted until all danger of frost is past, while vegetables which grow best in cool weather and which may be planted early include lettuce, spinach, mustard, turnips, and Chinese cabbage.

Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

Care of Seedlings in Victory Garden.

By DEAN HALLIDAY

Watch for another enemy of Victory gardens—weeds—as soon as the seedlings have sprouted in the flat. The weeds will be easy to detect if the seeds were properly planted in rows and the rows in turn marked with name stakes. As illustrated in the Garden-Graph, the weeds will be easy to detect if the seeds were properly planted in rows and the rows in turn marked with name stakes.

MAP-MAKING'S IMPORTANT JOB IN WAR SCHEME

An Error Might Mean Death
For Soldier in Far-Away
War Areas.

By JOHN FRYE
CINCINNATI—(AP)—One job in this war that is neither mechanized nor streamlined is making the maps that guide American soldiers over foreign battlefields.

In the Cincinnati office of the army map service about 100 men and women of all ages spend hours with super-fine pens copying contour lines, roads, symbols, and names, and measure their day's accomplishment not in complete maps, but in square inches with not a hairline out of place.

In the machine tool shops on the other side of town, tolerances of 1/10,000 of an inch are considered close. In the map service, a variation of more than 1/100,000, and in some cases 1/200,000, in a contour line could send a soldier stumbling to death.

Yet every line is drawn free-hand. The workers copy strictly by eye and finger, and until the completed copy gets to the lithographer at the Washington headquarters, little of the machine age goes into the job.

Charles K. Vance, director here, wants more people on his payroll, for there's a tremendous job to be done every time the army prepares for a new offensive and it can't be hurried. The only answer is to put more people on it.

His staff now includes several housewives, a man who once tried farming from a log cabin, a 70-year-old retired draftsman—one of the best in the city in his active life—a young fellow in a zoot suit, and a deaf man.

Vance said he never realized during the training period that the latter was deaf. He seemed to be taking instruction intelligently, and not until Vance was asked to repeat something said when the man couldn't see his face did he realize the trainee was reading his lips on the highly technical matter.

The main thing in this work, Vance explained, is a steady hand and patience. We don't want anybody to pile up records. We'd rather have them do six square inches perfectly in a day than turn out a whole section that we couldn't depend on.

The precision of the work is illustrated in the process. No one worker draws everything that appears on his particular section of a map. One draws contour lines, another natural features, a third buildings, roads and the like, a fourth water, and so on.

Each works on a separate board at the same time, and when all boards are finished, they are superimposed photographically, one on top of the other on the final copy. Thus all the fine lines, each kind done by a different person, must meet and match, or "register," from each of the half-dozen or so boards. The sea must end at the shoreline, though the man who drew the sea in may not even know the man who drew the shoreline.

Another delicate task is conversion from meters to feet in the scale. Available French source maps for the North African campaign were scaled in meters, with contour lines at every 25 meters, or about 82 feet. Our army wants the contour lines every 100 feet, as on American topographical maps.

So the lines must be interpolated. The draftsman must be able to feel the proper proportions in the conversion. He can't go to the spot and survey the 100-foot line, but he must be able to tell where it goes just the same. And that with a tolerance of 1/100,000 inch.

The map-makers were among the select few who know the North African campaign was brewing because they got a rush order last summer for maps of that area.

"Not a one of them let out a word about it," Vance said.

Dedicate Jefferson Memorial

An April 13, the 200th anniversary of his birth, the beautiful Thomas Jefferson memorial on the Tidal Basin in Washington, D. C., will be dedicated. A heroic statue of the third president stands beneath the dome. This is latest photo of the memorial.

CHANGES BRING MODERN BIBLE

New Translation, Started 7
Years Ago, Completed
By Catholics.

(AP Features)
NEW YORK — The Bible has been brought up to date. For the first time in 192 years, a revised, modernized New Testament and Commentary has been published for Catholics.

Issued by the Catholic Biblical association, the new work is translated from the Latin Vulgate source.

"Every effort has been made to translate the full meaning of the New Testament in the terms of today in hope that Scripture-reading will become a habit for Christians," says the Rev. John E. Steinnueller, one of the many contributors and translators.

Here are a few of the hundreds of instances of change: Verb forms such as "hath," "runneth," and "doth," are largely eliminated. So is the use of "ye" in the plural, but "thee" and "thou" are retained because of the advantage over "you" in denoting singular.

"Corn" becomes "grain." (Corn is maize to Americans.)

"Script" becomes "writ"; the man "ill of palsy" is a "paralytic"; Jonah was in the "fish's belly," instead of "whale's"; "bread" and "meat" in the sense of a meal are simply "food."

The familiar verse in three Gospels: "Suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not" is now "Let the little children come unto me and do not hinder them."

The translation began in 1936. Cloistered monasteries, schools, prelates and priests all over the United States gave of their best minds. The translators and editors kept notes, which became the Commentary—a guide and explanation of the text.

The Commentary and notes in the Testament give something of the pattern of the Gospel: Matthew, who wrote for the Jews and presumed his readers were versed in the Old Testament; Mark, who wrote for the Romans; under Peter's influence; Luke, the learned physician who used exact medical terms, who was close to both Mother Mary and Paul, and who wrote the "universal" Gospel; and John, the inspired theologian.

STOCK MARKET DISPLAYS MILD UPWARD TREND

Heavy Tax Payments In First Quarter Cause Increase In Bank Clearings.

(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK—Stocks generally exhibited mild advancing tendencies in today's early market proceedings.

Up fractionally at a moderately active opening were Chrysler, Standard Oil of Cal., Sperry, Phelps Dodge, Sears Roebuck, Union Carbide and United Fruit.

Boardroom noted bank clearings in 23 cities rose sharply in the week ended Wednesday, mainly as the result of heavy tax payments for the first quarter. Dun & Bradstreet estimated the increase over the like 1942 week at 14.1 per cent.

Reports Industry Takes More Farm Men Than Draft

As though in answer to demands that farm labor be granted draft deferment, selective service officials in Ohio released the results of a 13-county survey, which showed that industry took twice as many men from the farms as the armed services.

The survey covered an unreported period which concluded March 1.

Col. C. W. Goble, state director, emphasized that the survey's results were not estimated, but based on actual file by file check of every man of military age registered in the particular board.

The survey revealed that the farms in the 10 counties checked furnished considerably less men to the armed forces in proportion of farmers, to registrants engaged in other activities. Col. Goble said.

The survey included Butler, Crawford, Highland, Madison, Medina, Morrow, Pickaway, Putnam, Van Wert, and Wayne counties.

ASHLAND GROCER 50 YEARS DIES

ASHLAND—M. T. Sharp, 71, Ashland grocer for the past 50 years, died this morning at his home.

He was a wholesale merchant, having operated a grocery in Mt. Vernon prior to coming to Ashland in 1903. He was born in Gambier, April 19, 1871.

He was a member of the Evangelical church, Masonic lodge, and the National Wholesale Grocers association.

Survivors include besides the widow, the following daughters, Mrs. Elizabeth Seamans, Mrs. Allen George and Mrs. Bernice Shaffer, all of Ashland, and six grandchildren.

Arrangements for the funeral, which will be held Saturday, have not been completed.

TELLS ABOUT DIEPPE RAID IN NEW BOOK

Reynolds Describes It In
'Dress Rehearsal' Placed on Library Shelves.

It is now apparent that the Dieppe raid was a dress rehearsal for the invasion of North Africa, and other events to come. Quentin Reynolds saw it from the deck of the commanding officer's destroyer and tells about it in his latest book, "DRESS REHEARSAL," which is among the new books to be placed on the shelves of the Mansfield Public Library Saturday.

Reynolds' book is not a cold, objective account of an outstanding historical event, but a thrilling eye-witness report filled with exciting and humorous details. He tells his story with the same gusto and personal details that characterized his "Only the Stars Are Neutral."

ITALY FROM WITHIN by Richard G. Massock is an outline of the failure of Fascism in Italy; the years of war in Ethiopia, Spain and now the whole world, through which Mussolini has dragged the Italian people; and the low estate to which Il Duce has brought himself as a valet of Hitler. By keeping his story as far as possible factual and objective, Massock gives the reader a good understanding of what has happened to Italy and of what may happen before the end of World War II.

TROUBLESHOOTER by Robert Traver is the story of a northwoods prosecutor. For almost ten years in the remote world of Michigan's Upper Peninsula, Robert Traver has served as district attorney. Like the country doctor, the country prosecutor is a handy man, and Traver's cases have ranged from arson to church-social hair-pulling, to murder by dynamite. He knows his country and his people, and he has created from their more bizarre activities, a touching and hilarious narrative.

SNOW ABOVE THE TOWN by Donald Hough is a clever chronicle of a man and his family, literally stranded for a season in a valley town in Wyoming, in the heart of the Grand Tetons—from the time the dust clouds settled at the rodeo until the snow came down and marooned the town itself.

BLACK-OUT IN GRETLEY by J. B. Priestley is the story of a small industrial town in the Midlands, of the "little men and women" whom Priestley knows so well and what the war is doing to them—particularly of a young and impudent Canadian who goes there on counter-espionage work, and of all the exciting and amusing things that happen to him while rounding up a vicious collection of Nazi spies. It is a grand mixture of humor, adventure and solid characterization in Priestley's inimitable manner.

ARROW IN THE SUN by Jon Reed Lauritzen is an unusual first novel by a young westerner. It is the story of a boy who was half Navajo and half white, and it tells of the conflict in himself between the two worlds, for he was drawn first to the one and then to the other—to the whites by his love for a Mormon girl whom he feels to be unattainable, to the Navajos by their way of life. Violence flared between the whites and the Indians and, through his participation in the struggle, he finally made his choice and found peace.

THE WALTZ IS OVER by Hector Pine, author of "Beer for the Kitten," is a long novel which tells of the slow change from German to American in this story of three generations of one immigrant family—the family of Marta Nordlander. An inspiring, sometimes tragic book that will appeal particularly to women.

Other fiction includes:

YANKS RETAKE GAFSA, DRIVE TOWARD GABES

British Storm Mareh Line as Huge Tank Battle Rages In Donets Basin.

Other developments: RUSSIA—Soviet dispatches reported a gigantic tank battle fought under skies alive with Nazi dive bombers and Red army Sturmoviks, was raging in the Donets river valley below Kharkov today as the Germans stepped up the fury of their come-back offensive. Despite the violence of the German attacks, Soviet headquarters declared the Red armies were stubbornly holding their lines, exchanging blow for blow and beat off six waves of Nazi counterattacks in the Chuguev sector, 22 miles southeast of Kharkov.

Dispatches to Red Star, Soviet army newspaper, said Russian shock troops captured two unidentified tanks in bitter fighting on the west bank of the Donets river and then repulsed German attempts to recapture the towns with a mass tank attack.

Soviet Sturmovik planes, known as "tank busters" because of their armor-piercing cannon, were reported inflicting great losses on German tanks.

On the central front, the Soviet mid-day communique reported the capture of 32 more towns and villages south of Bely as the Red armies drove roundabout over strong German defenses in their offensive against the Nazi Citadel at Smolensk, 230 miles west of Moscow.

Russian vanguards were reported only 40 miles from Smolensk. To the north, in the Lake Ilmen region, Marshal Semyon Timoshenko's army was reported striking closer to the Nazi stronghold at Staraya Russa, and the Berlin radio acknowledged that Russian tanks, infantry, and air-borne troops had made a "small breach in the German line."

'Blood and Guts' Takes Over In Tunisia

AN ADVANCED BASE IN CENTRAL TUNISIA—(AP)—With a pearl-handled six-shooter strapped to his waist and with impartial curses for Hitler and any American soldier he thinks is shirking, "Old Blood and Guts" is up to his neck today in his favorite occupation—fighting.

Lieut. Gen. George Patton, Jr., has taken over command in this sector.

His men have just pitched the German out of Gafsa and "Old Blood and Guts" everybody in the army below the rank of lieutenant calls him that—has ordered them to take out after the enemy. Our patrols are in pursuit now.

He is wearing his usual uniform for this show. It consists of a steel helmet, a brown leather jacket, an ordinary pair of government issue pants and tank boots. A cowboy model six-shooter swings at his hip, and sometimes he wears two of them. "Old Blood and Guts" prefers to direct a battle standing up in a light tank so he can get up and down the line quickly.

Patton is taking this war seriously that he has given up smoking and drinking until Tunis and Bizerte are captured. He enjoys both a smoke and a drink and is looking forward to both. "I hope," he says, "that when I enter Tunis somebody meets me with a cigar and a bottle of whiskey."

Patton is 57 and the hair turning gray. But he has a fresh complexion and alert eyes of steel blue. Twenty-five years ago he was an aviator, and since then he has specialized in mobile warfare, particularly in desolate terrain until now he is recognized as the army's foremost expert on tank fighting.

His favorite fighting man is the buck private.

"The private who is out there getting shot at does most of the work in this war," he says. "He gets damned little credit for it. 100. A man can be as famous as he has back home on a tank in a day, but it takes guts to lead in a foxhole in the front during cold rations."

His attitude toward the common soldier is one of friendly respect, but he has the most direct language in the army when he is giving out an order. "You are making a mistake, Patton's voice is known throughout the army, and a typical example of a command early in the North African campaign. He commanded the force that occupied Casablanca and ran into the stiffest fighting of any unit. A few days later he went to Allied headquarters and was persistent to hold a press conference to tell about operations in his sector.

His report consisted of one sentence: "Everything is going damned good in Casablanca."

Allies Discover Empty Jap Base

BULLETIN—(AP)—American fliers have delivered three more blistering attacks on Kiska in the Aleutians, hitting the Japanese submarine base there and shooting down two enemy planes in a dog-fight, the navy announced today.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN MEXICO—(AP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters announced today a recovery of elaborate Japanese positions.

Lakeville Man, Missing 24 Days, Found In Lake

Rush, who usually walked across the ice to his home, disappeared shortly after 7 p. m. on Feb. 20. His watch had stopped at 7:25 p. m. that night, Sheriff Weiss said.

The body was taken to the Morgan funeral home at Shreve, where services will be conducted Friday at 2 p. m. Burial will be in the Fairview cemetery near Lakeville.

Surviving are the mother, Mrs. Ellen Rush of Lakeville; three sisters, Mrs. Dave Anderson, Sewickley, Pa.; Mrs. Brooks Johnson of Wooster; and Miss Aelous Rush of Cleveland; and six brothers, Grover, with the U. S. forces in Australia; Elzie, in the army at Camp Dix, N. J.; Clarence and Warren of Wooster, Kenneth and Dallas of Lakeville.

SPEED NEEDED, THEY GAVE IT

Red Cross Canteen Unit and Motor Corps Respond To Troop Train Call.

the loading of the food into the dining car. From the coaches, soldiers poked their heads out the windows grinning and waving at the women bringing them food.

A sizable crowd attracted by the activity in the station gathered to see the train. During the brief stop they chatted with the soldiers who entertained them with typical "rookie" tales. The men proudly displayed to the onlookers the three dogs traveling with them as mascots. These ranged from the tiny pup, "Jeep," to a fine collie affectionately dubbed "Blitz."

Sgt. Skelton revealed that the four coaches of troops and several cars of equipment had left Ft. Monmouth, N. J., on Monday at 7 p. m. and were on their way west to an unidentified destination.

He said that the shortage of food on the train was no fault of the railroad company. He explained that the company had already provided two meals more than originally scheduled. An unavoidable circumstance had prevented another dining car from reaching them.

The call for food originally came to the USO and since it was not equipped to carry out the task, the call was transferred to the Red Cross. There staff assistants immediately took over the task of rounding up members of the canteen and motor corps.

IT'S BAD RECORD

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Leonard M. Welles, Columbus, set a somewhat unenviable record today. He posted $55 cash bond for his appearance in municipal court Friday to face 45 charges of overtime parking.

tions about 50 miles above Buna, New Guinea, which apparently were intended for use as the base for a new offensive by the 15,000 enemy troops reported killed in the battle of the Bismarck sea.

The positions, which had been evacuated in haste recently, were found by Allied ground forces mopping up in the area of the Manabare river mouth, said the communique, which also reported Allied airmen had blasted Rabaul, New Britain, with 392 bombs.

The Manabare river mouth is between Buna, now held by Allied forces, and Lae, the Japanese base still farther up the coast toward which the 22-ship Japanese convoy with its 15,000 troops was heading when it was destroyed by Allied airmen.

The attack on Rabaul, just after dusk yesterday, started many explosions and fires, including heavy destruction of aircraft on the ground, the communique said.

British Forced To Retreat In Burma

WITH THE BRITISH FORCES IN BURMA, March 13—(Delayed AP)—It now may be told that Japanese forces, pushing in two columns north and west into western Burma since March 1, have forced British and Indian troops to withdraw westward from Kanchaw, situated 5 miles north of Akyab on the Kaladan river.

As a result, the Japanese in the future may threaten the land supply routes to the British troops fighting on the Mayu peninsula within ten miles of Akyab.

Japs Open Attack West of Salween

CHUNKING (AP)—Some 20,000 Japanese troops have opened an offensive west of the Salween river in southwest Yunnan province, a Chinese military spokesman said today.

Four enemy columns, covering a mile area, were reported advancing toward Lunglung toward the Salween's west bank.

In the past Japanese forces have expanded approximately 50 miles north of the Burma road, but this is their first big push to the south.

As Blaze Levels Farm Home Near City

This crumpled mass of wreckage and lone chimney were all that remained today of a 13-room double-house which was destroyed by fire Wednesday afternoon on State Route 13 one mile south of Mansfield.

Flames believed to have started from a smoke house where meat was being treated yesterday afternoon destroyed a 13-room, two-family house on the Main street road one mile south of Mansfield.

A few articles of clothing and two or three pieces of furniture were all that could be removed from the house before a high wind drove the flames through it. The fire, starting about 1 p. m., was out of control before the Mansfield fire department arrived. Firemen helped save nearby buildings.

The large house was occupied by Mrs. Minnie McCullough and her son, Russell, lived in one part of the house while the other apartment was occupied by the Paul Koozer family. A strong wind carried flames through the frame structure so rapidly that the Mansfield fire department was unable to control the blaze. The loss was partly covered by insurance.

U-BOATS PRESS HEAVY CAMPAIGN

Nazis Go All Out In Effort To Hold Off Invasion Of Europe By Allies.

Other developments indicating the increased tempo of Germany's submarine offensive were: 1—A statement by Director Elmer Davis of the U. S. Office of War Information that March looks like a bad month from the aspect of ship sinkings.

2—Prime Minister Winston Churchill's announcement in commons that the battle of the Atlantic has been given "first priority" in Allied plans.

3—An unconfirmed, but obviously exaggerated, German claim that Axis submarines have sunk 79 ships totalling 500,000 tons during the first half of March.

Allied authorities also were giving their attention to a Swedish report that Germany is massing her entire high seas fleet, including at least three capital ships and two aircraft carriers, in northern Norway for attacks on the Allied supply route to Russia and Anglo-American convoys to Britain and North Africa.

Sketchy information available indicated that the Germans were concentrating most of their submarines—estimated at upwards of 500—in the North Atlantic where the Italians shared the burden of attacks in the South Atlantic.

Only Monday the Italian high command claimed that an Italian submarine had torpedoed the 21,517-ton British troop transport Empress of Canada in the Atlantic. The sinking has not been confirmed by Allied sources.

The German claim to have sunk 500,000 tons, in the first half of March was a grim reminder that during the last war the Germans stepped up their "U-boat offensive" to the point where in April, 1917, they sank 430 Allied and neutral ships totalling 832,000 tons, including one out of every four vessels that left the British Isles.

The Anglo-American-Canadian anti-submarine conferences, recently concluded in Washington indicated that the Allied naval command already is searching—and perhaps has found a solution to Germany's present intensive submarine campaign.

ENTERS PLEA

Man Denies He Got Brother To Go To Army For Him.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—James R. Owens, 27, of Beaver, Pike county, pleaded innocent to charges of failing to report for induction and causing his 14-year-old brother, Ellis, to substitute for him.

U. S. Commissioner Robert S. Rowan said James told him his brother asked to be allowed to go. The commissioner set James bond at $3,000 and set his hearing for March 24.

p. m. today for final instructions. They will be assigned to specific areas and will be under the jurisdiction of the city police. Chief Meade K. Bates has ordered every member of his department on duty.

War plants will not be required to participate in tonight's dim-out or in the coming blackout tests if they previously have demonstrated their ability to comply with regulations in event of an actual air raid.

Beginning tomorrow, stress will be laid by OGD officials, Mayor W. J. Locke, council chairman, said, on development of fire watcher units and other protective groups. With the advent of spring weather, the mayor said, practical outdoor training for firemen, utilities crews and others can be carried out.

STATE FINALLY TAKES LIQUOR RATION STEPS

House-Approved Bill To Limit Purchases Goes To Senate For Final Action.

ing would be adopted shortly after the first of the year. After Fisher took over, however, the subject was seldom mentioned.

Discussion of the ration bill slipped into the field of politics when Rep. Fair made his charge that Governor Bricker's lack of foresight in not using surplus funds to purchase supplies when they still were available was responsible for the current shortage.

"This is the first time I have risen to talk on this floor that I have not been full of my subject," Fair observed.

Rep. Paul H. Ballard, R., Jackson, took issue with Fair, declaring that "if I were a member of a party that has rationed everything from hell to breakfast, I wouldn't say anything about foresight. It may not be long until we see people standing in line for a quart of milk."

Rep. Harry E. Schwall, R., Fulton, attacked the emergency feature of the bill after Metzgerbaum was declared that the clause was necessary because a number of "Ohioans are suffering from colds and snake bite." He said liquor sometimes is used for treatment.

"Let's call a spade a spade," retorted Schwall. "I propose that we amend section two of this bill to read: 'This is an emergency measure to prevent poor people from standing in the rain to become poorer.'"

Rep. Robert A. Wilkinson, R., Van Wert, pointed out that "we have a wonderful opportunity to please both the wets and drys. I hope the house does not pass it up."

Wilkinson referred to a letter from S. P. McNaught, superintendent of the Ohio Anti-Saloon league, and endorsed by the Women's Christian Temperance union, calling upon the house to leave rationing to the discretion of the liquor director instead of making it mandatory.

The house also defeated amendments which would limit the purchase to pints and which would apportion 60 per cent of available supplies to retailers and 40 per cent to wholesalers.

The bungling of the liquor situation—which has been acute since last December—has produced an interesting assortment of developments in Mansfield, most of which probably have been duplicated elsewhere in the state.

Here, on the basis of information obtained from qualified authorities on the subjects involved, is a survey of some of the developments in Mansfield resulting from the shortage:

Many individual purchasers of quart containers of whisky daily at the state stores are agents of bootleggers in the "flats" who pack the single bottles they buy into case lots and offer quantity sales to tavern keepers at "black market" prices. For a whisky which the innkeeper would pay $23 to $25 per case at the state wholesale store—if he could get it—the "black market" quotation is $15 in lots up to five or more cases.

New Straitsville liquor, famous for its potency during the prohibition fiasco (meaning tragedy) again is being offered Mansfield saloon-keepers at average prices. New Straitsville was the mecca of rum-runners during the 20's and the hubbub of prohibition enforcement agents.

Grain alcohol is available at $8 a gallon and is finding a ready market among unscrupulous bartenders who replenish their stock of inferior whiskies obtainable at the state wholesale store. When a Navy To Consider Employment Record In Awards.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The navy announced today army-navy "E" awards to manufacturing plants for excellence in war production would be withheld from organizations "failing to show a good employee attendance record."

"Excessive absenteeism among organizations producing war materials would disqualify them in securing the 'E' award or a renewal of it," a navy statement said.

Persons who like a little liquor occasionally note that the same persons are in the line-up each day to absorb the abbreviated stocks offered at Mansfield's two state stores. These persons apparently are unemployed individuals with nothing to do but wait in a line-up for any length of time until the short supply is offered for sale.

the infantry attack more than enemy fire did. Engineers went ahead of the infantry, cautiously poking the ground in search of mines. They didn't find all of them.

Thirty yards from where I was sitting in a jeep there was an explosion and it turned and saw a big truck going up into the air. By some odd chance, the truck was destroyed but none of the men in it even were injured.

The infantry was held back until the mines could be cleared out but meantime our artillery went into action again. At 10:30 o'clock they got the range on the El Guettar road along which the Germans were retreating and culloose with a barrage. At 11 a. m. the big guns poured it on the retreating enemy again.

Just before noon the engineers had before now enough mines for the infantry to advance, and our troops marched back into the town which we had yielded to Marshal Erwin Rommel's attack on Feb. 14.

CHAPTER XIX

Bill thought, "This isn't getting me anywhere. Why don't I go back in and forget it?"

But the thoughts kept nibbling and with the thoughts came longing and aching . . . longing and aching for Carol. If he could just see her and talk to her it would be as if he had come home. He hadn't any home. The house that he and Evelyn had rented had never been home to him. He always felt as though it were a place he had rented for the night and the next day they would move to another place until eventually he would come home to the familiar things he had known with Carol . . . To his bed, to his favorite chair, to the convenience of having his clothes always in the same place and always clean and the cap always back on the toothpaste and the things he liked to eat served to him.

His mouth twisted into a wry smile as he thought, "I'd probably tell Carol I haven't had any fried chicken the way I like it since—"

Fried chicken . . . and the high road of romance with Evelyn!

When he thought of what Freda had said of the men interested in Carol, he winced. This shamed him, too, that he was selfish about her, that he could not bear to think of her belonging to anyone else or of another man's knowing her as he had known her.

The wind blew hot, then cold upon him. If he could only go back! If he could just wave a wand and obliterate the divorce and have his life as it used to be, his sane, orderly, certain life with Carol, his knowing that she would never blunder, that she always found words to put into his mouth when he needed them and ideas in his head when he needed them, too. If only he could have the fun and comfort and naturalness of that existence again!

"Gone . . . Gone with the wind," he thought with sickening sadness and regret. "It's gone with the wind all right . . . I can only think about it."

There is no tracing paper for life. Never before had yesterday seemed so finished, a day to which you could never return to live over again with greater fullness and sweetness because you know now and only now how sweet and full it had been the first time.

Not before had he admitted to himself the extent of his embarrassment when Evelyn was with his family. Consequently, he was also ashamed of his neglect of his mother. In the beginning of his second marriage he had thoughtlessly neglected his mother, but of late he had stayed away, telephoning her regularly, not because his mother did not like Evelyn but because Evelyn put his mother so much on her "company behavior" that the atmosphere was the same he remembered as a boy when the clergyman had come to call.

Stiffly his mother sat in her living-room trying to make conversation with the pleasant, but inarticulate Evelyn. The few times when they had been invited to dinner along with the other members of his family again the atmosphere had been painfully stiff and polite and wholly unnatural in a high-spirited family. They were afraid of Evelyn in that dim, inexplicable way that simple people are afraid of other people of a so-called higher caste. It recalled to him the dinners at his mother's home when Carol was with him and when the conversation had been thick and fast and often hilarious.

Evelyn thought it odd that his mother did not have a cook, but genuinely enjoyed cooking for her family. Bill missed, too, visiting his less successful brothers and having them come to see him and his long talks with Carol about his family. He missed all of it . . . all of the tender, natural little things that had made up his marriage to Carol!

He thought, "I can't stand here all night thinking about this. I've got to go back in and join the party."

Slowly he walked back to the warm, crowded club house, seeing that only Thelma sat at the table and that Evelyn was dancing with Tom. He did not see Freda and Ian.

"What happened to you?" Thelma asked sharply. She pushed a glass before him. "This hasn't been touched. I wonder that you don't take to liquor more seriously . . . Excuse me, I'm going to powder my nose."

So many people here, drinking, dancing, flirting, having a wonderful time. . . . His fingers tapped the cold glass. He looked at the glass, thinking how lonely you could be with so many people and so much gaiety about you. . . . How lonely, how full of longing to turn back the pages of your life. . . . He knew now how Carol had felt that night in November.

Freda was standing on the deck of her boat the next morning when Ian joined her. She was standing very still as she read the newspaper.

"What's up?" Ian asked. "What's the news?" So rarely did Freda stand quietly.

"Cornelius Veger is dead," she said in a flat voice. "His obituary fills a couple of columns. Heart attack brought on from strain over a lawsuit. Poor little guy. He didn't want to be old. He had so much money and he wanted a young wife. I'm glad Carol was sweet to him. I think he really believed that she would marry him."

A week before Christmas Carol and Scott came into Carol's apartment. It was late Sunday evening and they had come from dinner at Freda's.

Scott had asked, "May I come up and have a cigaret with you, Carol?"

She hesitated a moment, then, "Of course."

She had wished that they had said good-night downstairs because she was leaving the following day to spend Christmas with her father and wanted a long night of sleep.

The apartment looked inviting and intimate after the cold ride in from the country in the gently falling snow. Leaving Scott in the living-room, she went to the bedroom to take off her things and to fix her hair. Her small trunk packed, she had to step by it in order to reach her dressing table. Sitting down, picking up the comb, she regarded her face from which suddenly had gone all the excitement and anticipation of a sea voyage . . . because she had to go back and talk to Scott.

Months ago she had come to know that he bored her and that he had no secret he was withholding, but that his secretiveness held only shallowness and ambition and conceit. For these things she would forgive him. He was one of her friends who had remained loyal. Later as she had begun to build a new life and new friends in the democratic hospital she had come to know that Scott was jealous of her new friends and that his wish to monopolize her caused his dark moods and deep, impenetrable silences.

It seemed to her a strange manifestation of love . . . if he loved her. He had not once said that he did and his only overt display of affection had been an occasional squeeze of her hand while dancing and his more than casual touch when he helped her on with her coat. Tonight at Freda's house he had been obviously ill at ease and preoccupied, and, coming home, he had uttered not a word. Like a cross, the pouting little boy who will not tell you what is troubling him.

She ran the comb through her hair quickly and adjusted the amber pin at the neckline of the black frock. Suddenly she was looking at herself again, speaking silently to herself . . . "I don't miss Bill tonight. But that is just tonight. I still miss him. I still think I hear his breathing when this room is dark . . . But getting the job was the best thing for me. It took me out of myself, made me think of other people and at times made me feel so fortunate that I was ashamed I had ever complained. But there have been times when I felt an awful lack and longing . . . the love Clive said I couldn't live without I have lived without it."

She smiled at herself. It was as though she were smiling at Clive and telling him things about herself he knew somehow without the telling. For in some strange way he often sprang to life beside her as Bill did. But while Bill always took her back, Clive took her ahead, fulfilling promises that had never been made. It was silly, fantastic, the way he had of coming to her mind when she had not heard from him since the spring and she was certain he had gone back to South America.

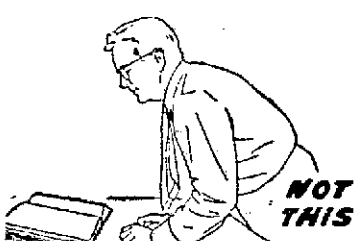

Perhaps she had not forgotten him, not because of his physical attractiveness but rather because at a time when she had felt ugly and discarded he had made her feel lovely and wanted. For that, she would always be grateful. For that she would probably always remember him.

She had received a rather half-hearted invitation to visit her father in Florida. She suspected that his half-heartedness was due chiefly to his inability to entertain her and his fears that she would not find a home completely comfortable for two aging men.

He suggested, in fact, that she stay at a hotel on the beach and rent a car so that she could commute between the hotel and the small house a few miles from town. She had made her plans accordingly, wondering whether he would be glad to see her, and, if he were, whether he would be too awkward to let her feel it. It had gone on too long, she had thought, their not seeing each other. With distance and her own hurts she believed that she was more tolerant of him as she had come to believe from his letters that he was more tolerant of everything and everyone. Friends were good and understanding, but there was undoubtedly a bond of sympathy even between a father and daughter who had always been almost strangers.

Our Country's Crisis in MEAT

The facts reported here concern the supply of meat for your family. Read them carefully. Use every bit of your influence to wake up your neighbors, your community, and your law enforcers to immediate action.

The rationing of meat and other vital foods has been announced by the government.

The government's aim in rationing, of course, is to apportion the available civilian supply of meat on a share-and-share-alike basis.

It should be understood, however, that rationing is no cure-all for the Black Market and actually can increase its evils.

Rationing cannot succeed if the Black Market is not curbed, and the menace of the Black Market can be controlled only by strict enforcement of the laws, backed by the sentiment of an informed, aroused and fighting nation.

What is the Black Market?

The Black Market is any method of getting meat to the consumer that wilfully evades government wartime food regulations.

Under the Black Market, an important percentage of the livestock supply that meat packers, large and small, have depended upon both for military needs and civilian consumption, has not come to market and is "siphoned off" to be consumed by a minority of greedy or unthinking individuals who can pay Black Market prices.

Illegal operators are buying animals on the farms at above market prices and arranging for their slaughter under trees, in barns, garages and abandoned buildings.

The Black Market has also resulted in a waste of hides needed for Army shoes, glands needed for medical supplies in military hospitals throughout the world, bones needed in the manufacture of photographic films for military purposes, and valuable by-products needed for livestock feeds and fertilizers by American farmers.

Even when meat animals have come to established markets, buyers for a new group of food racketeers, who have been illegally slaughtering and selling meat at bootleg prices, have often bid more than meat packers operating within the law could pay.

A CONSUMER PLEDGE

I will have no part of the Black Market.
I will not encourage it by demanding meats that are not legitimately available.
I will not stoop to paying illegal prices to keep any Black Market dealer in business or to encourage any honest dealer to enter it.
I will repudiate any person who thinks it is smart or shrewd to obtain Black Market meat.
I will add all the force of my conviction and influence to that of millions of other honest, patriotic Americans to stamp out the evil of the Black Market.
I will have no part of the Black Market—and neither shall you!

What are the violations that contribute to the growth of the Black Market?

1. When a meat packer of any size knowingly slaughters and sells more than his quota. (There is a quota for everyone from the farmer who kills a single hog up to the largest companies in the business.)
2. When a meat packer, wholesaler or retailer wilfully charges more than the ceiling price for any meat item.
3. When any meat handler (farmer, slaughterer, wholesaler, locker plant operator or retailer) falsifies records regarding amounts handled, prices charged, or sources of supplies.

What are the penalties?

Any slaughterer who sells more than the legal amount of meat for civilian use is liable for fines up to $10,000, up to ten years in prison, or both.

Meat packers, wholesalers or retailers who violate ceiling prices or falsify records are liable for fines up to $5,000, up to two years in prison, or both.

Have these penalties been enforced?

So far, to a very limited degree, but not enough to drive racketeers, illegal slaughterers and cheaters out of the meat business or to force the movement of all meat into regular channels, where everyone can get a fair share.

Is anything further being done to prevent the growth of the Black Market?

Yes. The U. S. Department of Agriculture has announced a plan under which all slaughterers and livestock dealers must be licensed. Every slaughterer, no matter how small, will be assigned a permit number and will be required to carry it on every wholesale cut of meat.

What are the dangers of the Black Market?

- If the Black Market gets a strangle hold on meat
  - rationing will be impracticable and unworkable
  - the consumer will pay more and more
  - the dealer will be forced more and more to deal with racketeers
  - the meat packer will be less and less able to take care of government requirements and the retail trade
  - the producer will be put under more and more regulations
  - nutritionally, more and more people will be deprived of the proteins, B vitamins and minerals of meat needed for strength and efficiency.

What can you as a consumer do to check the Black Market?

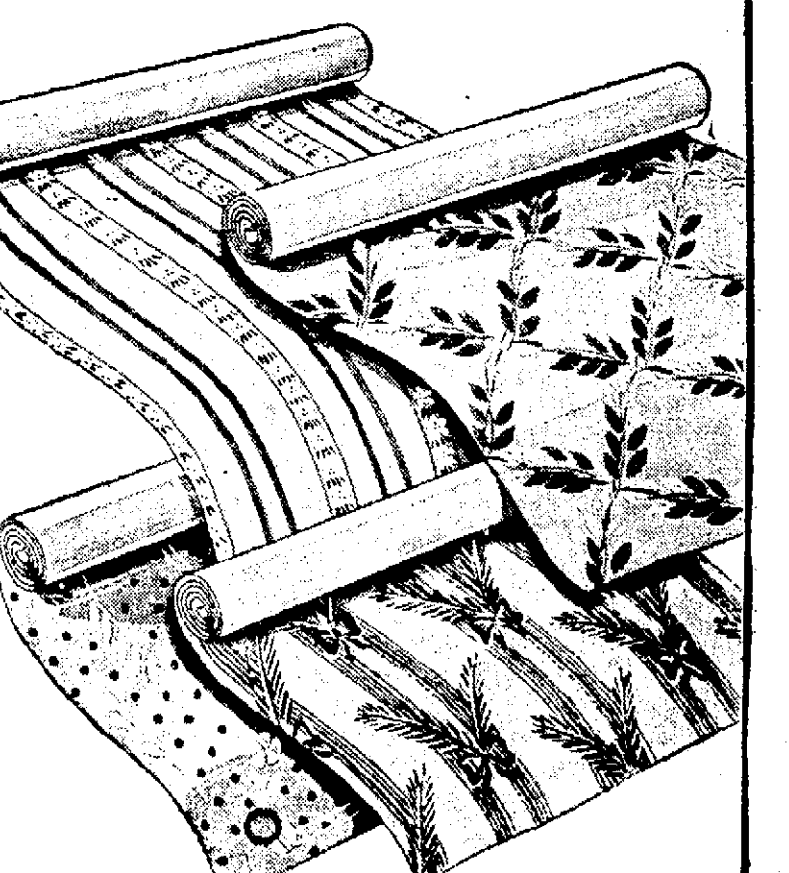

If you will make sure every time you buy that you pay no more than the legal ceiling price, you will dry up the profit which keeps the Black Market in business.

Meat racketeering operations cannot exist without the exorbitant profits which induce crooks and racketeers to take desperate chances with the law.

Until the time when all legally slaughtered meat carries some identification (under the licensing plan), the most important thing you can do is to insist upon knowing the price ceilings, and abiding by them. This alone will do a big part of the job of killing the Black Market.

By doing this you will help your country and yourself by freeing the people from the grip of racketeers, and insuring vital meat supplies for your own boys and your neighbors' boys who are fighting our battles.

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, THURSDAY, MARCH 18, 1943

Suggestion: A substantially constructed bread knife will come in handy to dig weeds.

And just to think—the whole income tax problem could be solved by collecting a quarterly payment each month.

A number of other Ohio cities report being well over their quota in the Red Cross war fund campaign—but Mansfield is deferring that happy moment.

Meat Rationing After Next Week

WITH little more than a week to elapse before the meat rationing program becomes effective, the past few days have provided opportunity for interesting study of public reaction toward restrictions to be imposed on meat-eaters.

A few—or at least, for the sake of democracy, it must be hoped that there were only a few—flocked to meat shops to buy more meat than they had ever bought before.

This followed the course pursued by agitated minorities when other rationing announcements were made in advance of starting dates and was also similar to the frenzied raids on clothing stocks a couple of weeks ago when rumors went around that clothing was soon to be rationed.

Whether, as is being charged, the need for rationing meat and other food supplies is due to bureaucratic mishandling in the past year, or to the mischievous policy of killing off little pigs and paying premiums for reduction of farm production a few years ago, is beside the point, insofar as the present situation is concerned.

The fact now being faced is that the nation's food supplies are insufficient to meet the requirements of adequately feeding our armed forces, shipping American-produced food to our allies and sustaining the civilian population at its customary standard of living.

So it comes about that, "until victory," it will be the requirements of nourishment, rather than appeal to epicurean tastes, that will influence the distribution of various foods.

Meat rationing will be on the basis of an average allowance of two pounds a week for each man, woman and child, but this will be somewhat flexible, due to inclusion of butter, cheese and "shortening" on the same coupons, and variation in allowances of different grades of meat—as, for instance, those buying steaks will get less and those buying soup-bones will get more for their coupons.

Even those who are now buying more than their fair share of available meat would undoubtedly express themselves strongly in favor of our fighting men being provided with all they need—possibly not realizing that their over-buying is throwing a monkeywrench into machinery designed for fair distribution of the civilian food supply.

Paving Repairs Urgently Needed

AS THE long winter season moves slowly toward spring it is becoming obvious that more than casual attention will have to be paid to repair of street paving, main highways and secondary roads this year if motorists are to be given reasonable co-operation in their efforts to conserve tires.

This has been deemed worthy of mention by William M. Jeffers, national rubber co-ordinator, who advises municipalities and states to make an immediate start on a paving repair program. As all motorists have noted, many streets and roads have been left in unusually bad condition through the winter, with holes, rough spots and breaks which add greatly to the wear and tear of all tires that pass over them.

Heavy truck traffic has also been responsible for damage to paving not designed to carry such weight and it seems fair to assume that revenues derived from motor vehicle sources are sufficient to meet the cost of proper maintenance of streets and highways.

Meeting the Teacher Shortage

COMMENDABLE willingness has been shown by a number of former school teachers to temporarily resume teaching so as to carry on the school system in spite of a shortage of teachers which has resulted from wartime opportunities to earn more money in some other line of work.

In a majority of instances these substitute teachers are married women who are discommmoding themselves in order to perform a community service for nominal compensation, but the competence gained by experience may, in some cases, work to the advantage of pupils who are privileged to be under their supervision.

Maintenance of a school system must be considered essential, even during a war, and the extent to which teachers should be relieved of contract obligations in order to engage temporarily in more remunerative work is at least debatable.

In any event, when the time comes for a trek back to teaching jobs it may be hoped that restoration to abandoned positions will be on the basis of qualifications and fitness rather than on claims to "tenure" or "seniority rights."

China's Historic Bones

BOTH HISTORIANS and everyday folk in China collect dragons' bones. The average man thinks these bones (which of course never belonged to dragons, but to cattle of many centuries ago), when pounded into powder, possess medicinal properties. The historian, however, finds in them priceless records of an unknown past.

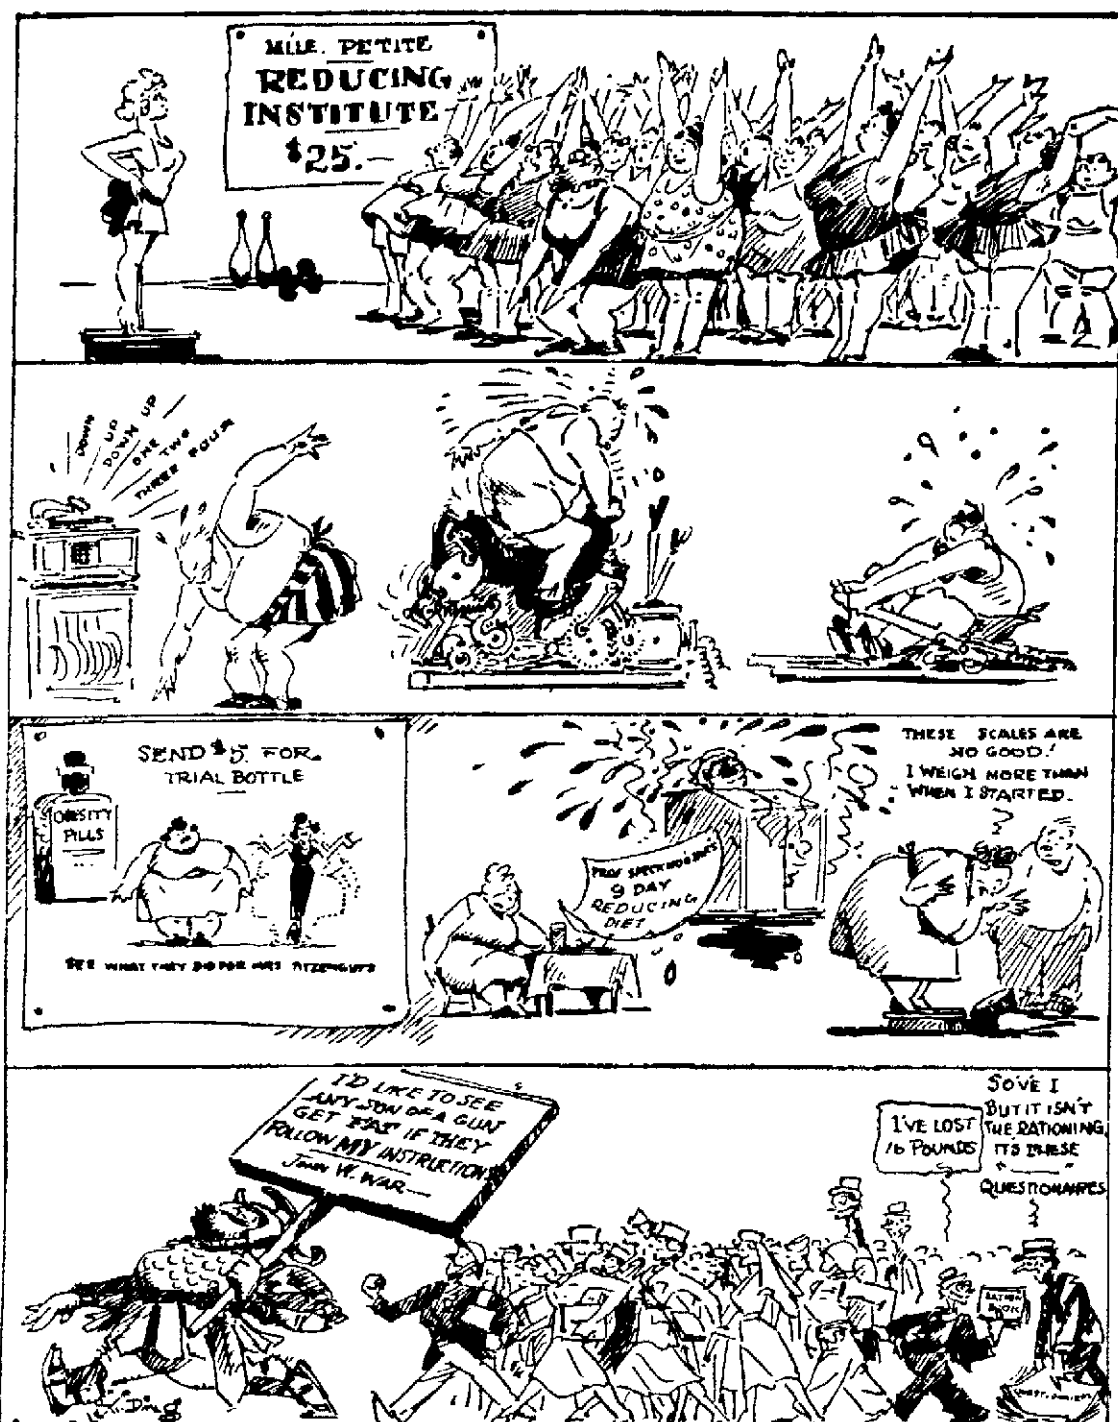

Prof. H. G. Creel of the University of Chicago has lately been publishing findings along that line. On such bones the Chinese man of 3,500 years ago wrote questions on which he wanted advice from the gods. The cracks which appeared when the bones were heated were supposed to show the gods' replies. To Prof. Creel and his colleagues the questions are the important thing. When a ruler asked, "Shall I send another army of 5,000 men against the prince of Chou?" it is safe to say that such an army had already been sent and was probably defeated. Many thousands of such informing bones have been found, and have told the world that China had an important civilization 3,500 years ago.

Now the war has put a stop to Prof. Creel's labors. All who are curious to know what occurred in ages past will hope that in the next year or two all these historic bones will not be ground to powder by seekers for medicine.

One reader suggests that the Delano plan for a postwar world adds two "freedoms" to the four already promised: freedom from work and freedom from saving.

The world can't be made any better until people are made better—one at a time.

IT'S EASY WITH THE RIGHT FORMULA

Oversight of Postwar Planners

By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—Most of the "experts" worrying about unemployment after the war are overlooking several very important factors. Even in their comparison to postwar conditions from 1918 they overlook them in painting the picture. One of the most important of these factors is that there was a considerable lapse of time after the last war between the armistice and the unemployment problem they discuss.

It was not until well into 1920 that the unemployment problem arose after the last war, though the armistice was in November, 1918.

So we should figure that there will be a period after the next armistice during which it would only complicate matters for the federal and local governments to undertake public works programs for the sole purpose of providing employment. If history repeats itself it will be 18 months before public works are necessary.

It MAY be considerably longer. Not only longer than the pessimists predict, but longer than most of the optimists are figuring.

It has been roughly estimated that 40 per cent of the productive manpower effort of the country was devoted to war purposes in World War No. I. Estimates of this time run all the way to above 70 per cent before we have reached the top. Probably we will reach at least that percentage before the coming armistice.

NOW let's look at the probable situation. Remember that in the last war, while we worried about priorities, and many manufacturers complained bitterly how hard it was to get this and that, there had been NO governmental injunction on the manufacture of even luxury products.

Then consider how many commonly used products simply are not being made now. Automobiles, radios for private use, washing machines, vacuum cleaners occur at once to the mind of anyone studying this problem.

But that is only part of the list, and then there is another category of things not made for private use directly, but which in peace time are made for the public.

A good illustration is railroad cars. Almost all railroad equipment is included, from engines to rails, from steel bridges to railroad ties.

Then there has been a virtual cessation of home building, save for government housing projects. Starting off with all the steel workers, aiding in the building trades, we begin to have quite a list of employments that will be eager to get more instead of less workers as soon as a peace time demand is in sight.

WE WILL probably stop ship construction as soon as practical after the armistice.

Health And Diet

Good Teeth And Pocketbook

—By DR. CLENDENING

THE economic relationships of health are known to every doctor, but to none as well as to the doctor who works in a dispensary clinic, as I have for 30 years and more. Disease and poverty go hand in hand, and in many instances it is impossible to treat a patient until his financial status is improved.

An astonishing proof of this is the study, just released, by Dr. Henry Klein on the number of teeth American adults possess at different age periods.

One By One. Age of course, has something to do with it also. The average American loses one tooth for each two and a half years of adult life. At the age of 18, the average American has 29.8 serviceable teeth which have an average expectancy of remaining serviceable for 31.5 years. (There are 32 teeth in the permanent set.)

By the age of 28 five teeth have been extracted, at the age of 42, about 14 have been extracted and at the age of 70, the average American has lost 23 permanent teeth.

Now as to the relation between the tooth and the pocketbook: between the ages of 18 and 70, persons whose average annual income is under $2,000 have a much greater annual tooth loss than those of $4,000 or more.

By the time he is 66 years of age, the person with a good income has lost on the average 21 permanent teeth, while the person in the low income brackets has lost 24.

In the low income brackets when the average person has reached the age of 32, he has lost 8 permanent teeth. The person with the good financial status has not lost that many until he is 37.

Statistical Lesson. The well-to-do are just as susceptible to caries and other diseases which result in the loss of teeth as those in low income brackets, perhaps more so.

The lesson would seem to be obvious. The well-to-do do preserve their teeth because they can afford to consult their dentists regularly.

but the demand for steel will be with us for several years after the war, to make possible the satisfying of the demand piled up during the emergency.

Then too, it will not be possible to get the troops home and discharged any faster than after the last war, at which time, it will be remembered, a record job was done getting the men home from France. The temporary occupation job will be much larger than last time, both in territory and in fighting men needed.

And surely there will be some jobs on the farms for several years after the war ends, not only for ourselves, but for starvation-ridden countries abroad.

Dave Boone Says:

THE WAY Americans treat war heroes ought to frighten them more than anything at the front. Barney Ross put up such a gallant fight with the marines in Guadalcanal that he got a reception home that has put him in the hospital.

The kid who wiped out a score of more Japanese thought he got rest when he got back to his own country, but the welcome-home receptions have been one ordeal after another. That's the pattern we follow toward our great.

We put Madame Chiang Kai-shek on the sick list, too, with what we strangely consider to be kindness and hospitality.

Barney had better stay in the hospital while he's got any desire to get relief from his sufferings. The schedule ahead of him calls for an immediate tour around the country speaking at war plants. The idea is to see if he can take more punishment at home than he took at the front, I guess.

"First to fight" is a great marine slogan but there ain't much sense linking it up with "last to rest." We ought to give wound stripes for bravery at receptions.

A Farmer's Diary By CALVIN A. BYERS

Neighbor Woodchuck

LAST mid-November I saw her clover a few feet from her house door. She still moved slowly, and before crossing her narrow threshold, she stood up in the familiar, watchful pose and looked at me. Her flabby flanks sagged, heavily. Soon there will be small woodchucks in that home.

I knew there might be various tunnels, upward from and draining into, that first deep, downward pitching entrance to the burrow, at a depth safe from frost and ending in a large room, the equivalent of a nursery. Here from six to eight helpless, wriggling babies can be cared for until, on some sunny April afternoon, I will watch to see the young, clean, furry groundhog family play outside for the first time.

Just once, I stood beside a similar burrow and let the clumsy youngsters play about my feet, not daring to touch or handle any of them, lest the mother be overly frightened and call the children in. A groundhog contributes little of value, I suppose. The musky odor of the meat makes it little used for food—although I have heard that, soaked in salt water overnight, it makes good eating. But even though she thieves my garden truck, girdles young trees, and gorges soybeans and clover, I seldom pass her home in the hollow without whispering a greeting. And sometimes, listening closely, I have heard an answer.

GOP Senators Give Preview of How They'd Handle the Country

WASHINGTON—With Democratic political popularity at a low ebb throughout the country, the voting public is now getting a significant glimpse of what it might expect of a Republican administration if elected. In recent weeks the glimpse has been a bit sour.

First there was the repeal of the $25,000 salary limit which benefited the grand total of 2,500 people in the entire nation, in contrast to the millions of wives and mothers getting about $50 a month from men at the front. Second came GOP whoopla over the Ruml plan which would also be a windfall of war wealth. Now comes the most interesting test of all—the line-up of Republican senators behind the old Huey Long gang, to secure appointment of a Huey Long judge to the 5th circuit court of appeals in Louisiana, merely for the satisfaction of embarrassing Roosevelt.

In the old days, when Huey was staging filibusters and hurling jeers at dignified GOP senators, they kept their noses in the air and stalked out of the senate chamber with holier-than-thou written all over their faces. But now they have swallowed their pride and ganged up with the remnants of Huey Longism—all for the pleasure of embarrassing FDR.

The judge Roosevelt refused to appoint—and whom the GOP now inferentially supports—is Huey's old friend, Archie Higgins, who recently voted against barring ex-Governor Dick Leche from the practice of law.

Leche, another Huey Long satellite, is serving ten years in jail. But when his disbarment case came before the supreme court of Louisiana, Judge Higgins remained loyal to the memory of Huey and dissented from disbarbing the imprisoned governor.

Higgins Helps Huey. WHILE the Kingfish was still alive, Judge Higgins was even more loyal. In almost every case coming before the Louisiana supreme court where one of Huey's policies was involved, Higgins went down the line.

In 1934, for instance, Huey's candidate for election to the supreme court was Justice Winston Overton, whose brother, Senator Overton, now so busy persuading Republican senators to vote against Roosevelt in the current judicial battle, Winston Overton was opposed to Judge Thomas F. Porter, anti-Huey Long man. But two days before the primary, Winston Overton died.

This left Judge Porter as the sole candidate, and he got the Democratic nomination, which in Louisiana is tantamount to election. But Huey Long's machine refused to accept his nomination and called for a second primary on Oct. 9.

Whereupon Judge Porter secured an injunction from a lower court preventing Huey's secretary of state from putting any other candidate's name on the ballot.

But the Long crowd appealed to the supreme court, where their friend Judge Higgins agreed to hear the case. But very conveniently he placed the date of hearing on Nov. 26 whereas the primary was to be held Oct. 9. Thus, Judge Higgins agreed to consider, six weeks after the primary, the then purely theoretical question of whether Judge Porter could be opposed in a primary which already had been held.

Long before the argument, of course, Huey had placed another candidate, John Fountain, on the ticket and Judge Porter had been defeated. Chief Justice O'Neill, vigorously dissenting, held that Judge Higgins' opinion emasculated the election machinery of Louisiana.

They Hate Roosevelt. ON ANOTHER occasion, Huey Long had trouble controlling the police jury of East Baton Rouge parish. So he jammed a bill through the legislature permitting his gang to appoint thirteen new members. After their appointment, the new Huey Long members brought suit against the old members to prevent them from doing business. The lower court refused to issue the injunction. But in the supreme court, Judge Higgins came to the rescue of his old friend the Kingfish, and wrote an opinion reversing the lower court.

In another famous case, one of Huey's political opponents, Dudley LeBlanc, was running for Louisiana public service commissioner. But Huey packed the ballot for commissioners of election with dummy candidates who would pass on LeBlanc's election. LeBlanc sued, and in the trial, the defendants admitted they were not bona fide candidates.

But, despite this, Judge Higgins in a 4-3 opinion ruled for the Long crowd on the ground that LeBlanc had not exhausted his remedies. He should have first appealed to Huey Long's executive committee, Judge Higgins said, though he admitted such an appeal probably would be a useless gesture.

There were other cases of this kind, most of them with Chief Justice O'Neill and two other justices vigorously dissenting. All of them occurred during the days when Senators Ellender and Overton were acting as glorified messengers boys for Huey Long, as they are now for the remnants of the Huey Long machine in trying to get Judge Higgins appointed to an exalted post on the U. S. circuit court of appeals.

It is possible to understand why Democratic Senators Gerry of Rhode Island, or Bailey of North Carolina, or Walter George of Georgia, can side with the Louisiana senators. They dislike Roosevelt more even than they did Huey Long. But it is going to be awfully difficult for righteous Republicans to explain why they now play into the hands of Huey Longism.

Capital Chaff.

Now definitely decided is that John Winant, Lincolnesque U. S. ambassador to Great Britain, will not return to his post in London. . . . Tom Corcoran, the ex-Brain Trustster, is trying to buy two cows for his children, aged one and two. Where he will keep them in the elite but crowded section where he lives remains a mystery to the neighbors. . . . Says beautiful Mrs. Pepper, wife of the senior senator from Florida: "If you think my husband is a rubber stamp, just try to live with him." . . . Favorite pastime of Jesse Jones is playing bridge at the Brazilian embassy. . . . The state department has recently received assurances from Franco that he will fight if Hitler attacks Spain. Such assurances have been received before, the glibble gentlemen in the state department always believing them, then, finding a few months later, that they are to hustle out and get some new assurances. ## Looking Down on Africa From a Plane That Carries Men and Supplies to Front.

NORTH AFRICA—We had hardly got off the ground when a mechanic came back and said the pilot wanted me to come up front.

So I crawled over a huge stack of boxes, bundles, spare tires, and bedding rolls lashed to the floor of the plane, and worked my way up into the pilot's compartment. The co-pilot's seat was empty. The captain motioned me into it.

"I thought you might like to see how it looks from up here," he said. And so, for the next hour and a half, I had the unusual privilege of seeing about 200 miles of Africa from the front of an airplane, up where the view is worth $8.00 a seat.

We were in what the army calls a C-47, but which flying people at home know as the Douglas DC-3, and which all laymen know as the great silver airliners that ply all the airlines of America in peacetime, and even still today, I suppose.

But over here they're no longer silver; they're a drab brown, and covered with mud at that. The soft easy seats are gone; on each side is just a long tin bench, with panlike depressions for parachutists to sit with their chutes on.

No longer is there a carpet on the floor, and a hostess at the back. Now the bare floor is covered with mud, and the hostess becomes a sergeant who hasn't shaved for two weeks.

For today these once luxurious airliners are the work-horses of war. They are absolutely wonderful. They are making a saga for themselves over here. They are flying anywhere, at any time, doing impossible jobs under impossible conditions.

They run a daily schedule between all our big headquarters in North Africa. They run in big fleets carrying supplies and men right to the front. They carry everything from jeeps to generals. They pay little attention to danger, and little more to weather. They are doing in a way what the spectacular TACA Airline did in the jungles of Central America.

THESE C-47s are over here by the hundred. Their pilots are sometimes looked upon patronizingly by the combat fliers, but it's an unfair attitude and they sure have the acclaim of everybody else.

In the last few years I had got to the point, after 15 years of flying, where I wouldn't get in a plane unless it was one of the regularly-scheduled airlines. Yet today I climb in with these fellows and fly around over the mountains and deserts of a strange continent with almost the same feeling of safety I used to have on the airlines.

My skipper on this special trip was Capt. Bill Lively, from Birmingham, Ala. He already has 1100 hours in the air, which is a lot for a young army pilot. He says they used to fly real low over here, just for fun. But the Arabs got to throwing rocks and shooting at them, so now they keep at a respectable altitude.

Outs was the lead plane of a formation of three Douglas's, with two Spitfires as escort. The Douglas's flew very close together, and the Spitfires ranged above and to the side of us, some-

HEAVY RAINFALL FLOODS CELLARS

ASHLAND—Cellars were at flood stage in Ashland and Perrysville today as a result of the rainfall of 1.4 inch which fell in this area Tuesday.

With the rise of the water level in Pleasant Hill dam near Perrysville, there was a recurrence of the flooding of cellars in that southern Ashland county town, it was reported to Ashland county commissioners. Perrysville suffered a similar experience last year when the dam level was raised because of spring rains.

HEAR REFUGEE

BUCYRUS—Annual Achievement day at the Y. M. C. A. Friday afternoon will bring together an estimated 150 Crawford county farm women to hear a program which will be highlighted by the appearance of Mrs. Henry Ebert, German refugee who escaped to this country 18 months ago after spending months in concentration camps in Germany and occupied France.

The program will include a talk on food supply by Nelle Thompson, nutrition specialist of Ohio State extension service, and a style review of remodeled garments.

GALION FATHER RETURNS HOME FROM SEA DUTY

Honorable Discharge Breaks Up City's Father-Son Navy Combination.

GALION — Having received honorable discharge from the navy because of a hearing ailment aggravated by gun fire, Shirl Galion, 44, machinist's mate second class, has returned to his home here, thus breaking up Galion's first father-son combination in military service.

Black's son, William S. Black, an apprentice seaman, is completing his training at U. S. Naval Training station, Great Lakes, Ill.

The elder Black served in the navy from Aug. 6, 1942, until last Friday when he was discharged. He had been receiving treatment at the U. S. Naval hospital, Navy Yard, Charleston, S. C.

During his service, he saw convoy duty in the south Atlantic aboard a light cruiser and returned last Dec. 10 from a two and a half months cruise during which time his ship was seeing supply vessels safely through submarine-infested waters.

He plans to return to his position as machinist with the Pennsylvania railroad where he was employed 16 years prior to enlisting in the navy.

ENDS FURLOUGH

GALION — With his ship scheduled to leave San Francisco this month, Leroy Sand, seaman first class, has ended his eight-day furloUGH with relatives in this vicinity. He left Monday of this week for San Francisco.

Sand is a shellman and has seen action in three major battles in the Pacific, two in the Solomon islands and one in the Coral sea. He has been in various parts of the Pacific, his duty as shellman being aboard a destroyer.

A son of Carl Sand of Vickery, near Castalia, Sand spent much of his time working for his grandfather, John Sand, northwest of Galion.

2 BOUND OVER IN HOLMES CASE

Killbuck Pair Held Under $1,200 Bond on Armed Robbery Charges.

MILLERSBURG—Alfred Endsley, 23, and Thomas Frazier, 23, Killbuck, who are alleged to have held up and robbed two men on March 6 near Berlin, were bound over to Holmes grand jury under $1,200 bond each at a hearing before Common Pleas Judge Elmo M. Estell, Tuesday morning.

Both entered a plea of not guilty on both charges of assault and robbery of Andrew J. Miller and Benjamin G. Troyer.

Endsley and Frazier are held in county jail.

Ray Purdy of near Brinkhaven was sentenced to serve 30 days in Holmes county jail for contempt of court by Judge E. M. Estell. He was previously fined $200 and costs for theft of a tire, tube and wheel from Bernard Manchester of Glenmont.

He was serving his fine out in jail when he escaped while at the office of a local doctor. He was gone three weeks when he was taken into custody again by Sheriff Harry R. Weiss.

Albert Lemmon was fined $50 and costs after he pleaded guilty to a charge of driving while intoxicated, before Judge Elmo M. Estell, Tuesday morning. He was also ordered to make restitution in sum of $6 for some damages.

WINS IN QUIZ CONTEST

BUCYRUS — Time magazine's prize, a book, "This Is My Best," by 93 authors, was presented to Ted Graetz by Bucyrus Lions club at its regular dinner meet Tuesday night, for his achievement in ranking in top place in the quiz program sponsored by the magazine recently.

BUCYRUS MAYOR TO RUN AGAIN

BUCYRUS—First to announce his candidacy for office subject to the August primary is Mayor William F. Whittemore, who today announced that he would be a candidate for a third term.

Mayor Whittemore, who owns and operates the City News stand, was elected mayor first in 1939 and again in 1941. He announced that he would become a candidate on his past record.

BENEFIT SHOW DRAWS CROWD

Galion Auditorium Filled For Second Presentation of Minstrel Program.

GALION—For the second time this week the Galion Senior high school auditorium was filled to capacity to enjoy the second presentation of the "Cotton Pickers" minstrels by the men of Galion.

Following Wednesday night's production, members of the cast, their wives and girl friends were guests at a buffet luncheon at Hotel Talbot, with the hotel manager, Charles Brown, as host.

The minstrels, in their two performances, were so popular that they will be presented again next Monday night when there will be no reserved seats. This will give opportunity to those who were unable to secure seats for the two previous entertainments.

Presented by the men of Galion, the minstrels were planned as a "Fathers' Night" program for the West Parent-Teachers association. A similar production presented last year on two nights brought such praise that it provided the incentive for another minstrel show this year.

Egan Logan, general chairman of the show, acted as interactor Wednesday evening, replacing Carl Bauer, and Louis Giron substituted for Franklin Craun in the closing patriotic number as both men left Tuesday on a trip to the southwestern states.

Guest entertainer on the program was Harry Meier of Mansfield, soloist.

Monday night's free-will offering at the auditorium doors following the show amounted to $140.06. This will be used for the purchase of milk for undernourished school children. Last night's collection will also be used for the same purpose.

FIRST DIM-OUT

Galion to Douse Lights For 15 Minutes Tonight.

GALION—Galion is getting set this week for its first test dim-out of residential sections. This will be held Thursday at 9 p. m. It will be conducted in the west zone extending south of West Church street to the Erie and Big Four tracks, and west of Union street within above limits to the city boundaries.

There will be a continuous two-minute blast of the sirens to signal householders and business places to "black-out." The period of black-out will be 15 minutes. The signal to turn lights on again will be a 30 to 45-second blast of the sirens. Street lights and traffic lights will not be turned off. Traffic will be permitted to move as usual.

C. E. Craun, zone warden, and A. L. Beach, auxiliary police, will check all sections for the effectiveness during the dim-out.

"USE IT UP... WEAR IT OUT... MAKE IT DO... OR DO WITHOUT"

This old proverb has come to life again, as a yardstick for wartime conservation. It's just another way of saying: "Don't throw anything away if there's still some use in it!"

This is especially true of clothes. Don't think they're not fit to wear because you're tired of them! Remodelling works wonders!

Making a little go a long way is part of the Penney tradition. Our storekeeping has always been of the thriftiest kind; our customers have always been people who know the value of a dollar!

COLUMBUS—The state board of liquor control today suspended for 20 days the beer and wine licenses of Candyland, owned by Tony Bahas, 66 East Main street, Ashland, for sales to minors. Imposition of penalty was withheld pending future good behavior.

OUTLINES SCHOOL WORK-SHOP PROJECT IN CRESTLINE TALK

CRESTLINE—Dr. Harold Shane of Columbus was in charge of a dinner meeting sponsored by the state department of elementary education at which the board of education members, their wives, members of the high school faculty and the elementary school teachers were in attendance.

The dinner was served by a group of women from the Methodist church where the meeting was held Tuesday evening.

Dr. Shane explained the work-shop project in elementary education which is being conducted in the schools here this week. Also working with Dr. Shane and present at the dinner meeting were Dr. Hershel Litherland of Bowling Green university and Dr. Lowry Harding of Ohio State university.

At the close of the dinner the group adjourned to the high school cafeteria where a social hour was enjoyed.

James W. Brown, who for 21 years was a Y. M. C. A. North American representative in Rumania and who is now making a tour of Y. M. C. A.'s, was guest speaker at the Kiwanis club luncheon meeting Tuesday noon at the Y. M. C. A.

The Kiwanis club meeting usually held on Wednesday was moved forward a day in order that the members might have this opportunity of hearing the speaker.

Brown told of his experiences in the third degree house where he was one of the first Americans subjected to the gestic punishment. He also spoke of the idea of Nazi domination of the world. He was once taken for a British intelligence man and later released when after much effort his true identity was discovered.

There was a large number of guests present for the meeting for which Dr. R. B. Smith presided.

Mrs. Harry White welcomed members of the By-By club and three guests, Mrs. Bert Ogle, Mrs. Gregg Pennington and Mrs. M. C.

Davis at her home Tuesday evening. In the club's diversion of bridge, Mrs. F. L. Borden won the high score award. The hostess presented each guest a gift.

The March meeting of the Merry Hour club was held in the home of Mrs. B. J. Fry with Mrs. F. W. Beck and Mrs. E. J. Neff guests present. Mrs. R. L. Hoffman will be hostess for the April meeting.

Because of the civilian defense meeting Tuesday evening, the degree work of the I. O. O. F. lodge, formerly planned for their Tuesday evening meeting, was postponed until next week. At that time work in the second and third degrees will be conferred on candidates from Crestline and the Tiro lodges.

MARINES TURN TO RELIGION IN WAR CRISIS

God Hovers Over Fleet When There's Danger,' Says Captain.

By Capt. B. K. Weatherwax
United States Marine Corps
Distributed by International News Service

SOMEWHERE ON THE PACIFIC—God hovers over a fleet in wartime and sailors and marines are peculiarly aware of his presence.

I know because I have seen and felt it. When chaplains were assigned, our ship missed out, and for the weeks that we have been at sea, the men in this command have seen without benefit of clergy.

It doesn't seem to affect the appetites of the marines any, and those who wished to observe Sundays had gathered on the after-deck to sing a few hymns and read a few verses of Scripture. . . and so it might have been on this Sunday—had things been on schedule.

But today we stood staring through the last hours of darkness in anxious expectancy. Life-jackets tied tight, every man at his station.

The lookouts strained their eyes into the blackness where shadowy shapes of the convoy grew blacker by the hour. An electric tension hung over the great ship loughing the darkness. Every sound was tested before it was dismissed as inconsequential.

The first gray of the coming day silhouetted the gunners at their posts, the boat crews standing by, and scattered groups of undershirt clad marines, standing, sitting and lying on the pitching deck.

I was standing on the flying ridge when the east grew lighter and the west turned a pale blue.

I saw the sea grow leaden gray by contrast, then deep blue as the colors of the spectrum heralded the first golden fragment of the sun. The tired, wind-blown lines of men that scattered the decks turned to the east with relief, hearts grown stronger with the daylight.

They were dressed as all marines after weeks at sea. Clean uniforms have either been worn down in a pitiless sun, or been discarded for eventuality.

As they stood by the rail, or crouched on the jacket-lockers or against the ventilators or the bulkheads, and as the first long gray shadows appeared astarboard, a only marine in a gray undershirt and wrinkled trousers, climbed on a hatch cover with his back to the new day.

He opened a pocket Bible to a page marked with a black ribbon. As though they had expected him, the hum of talk stopped, and a voice charged with sincerity, began to read. . . . Then he said, " . . . let us pray."

Some of the men instinctively bowed their heads; the majority stead fixed their eyes on the shrine. . . . we ask it in His name."

And from the silent decks a low audible "Amen."

The deckwalkers put their caps on, men coughed self-consciously, hitched their trousers, or lighted their pipes to the wind. Two armies drew their sheathknives and stepped off ten paces on the deck to throw at a target.

On the deck below me, men of the third watch started to secure their bedding rolls and the voice of the ho'sun called harshly rough the ship's speaker system.

"Now hear this. The first watch yaff on the double—on the double, I said."

And the ship's church pennant fluttered to the foretruck as an ant thought, and "the spirit of a Lord was upon the water." What impressed me, I am sure pressed all the men—the spontaneity and the sincerity of this voice, in the first light of a day at none of us had expected to see, was moving beyond and above a formal deck-church that is acted on some ships. I thought it all morning.

B. AND P. W. CLUB GIVES 'GAY NINETIES' PARTY

Business and Professional Women Observe 19th Anniversary at Mansfield-Leland Hotel; Miss Bertha Checaupolus Guest Speaker.

IN A "lavender and old lace" atmosphere, in gowns of the "gay nineties," the members of the Business Women's club celebrated their 19th birthday anniversary at the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

Dinner was served at long tables lighted by "coal oil" lamps and decorated with old-fashioned nosegays and appointments in keeping with St. Patrick's day.

Discuss Tentative Convention Plans At Sorority Meet

Preliminary plans for the national convention of Alpha Pi Sigma sorority to be held in this city in July, were discussed at the Tuesday night guest party of the Alpha Upsilon chapter of Alpha Pi Sigma, held in the Stinger Tea room.

During a brief business session, members decided to continue the plan of selling war bonds and stamps in the lobbies of local theaters for the duration.

The ways and means committee presented a program of selling occasional cards and gift wrapping to augment the chapter's convention fund, and plans for acquiring permanent clubrooms were also discussed.

Guests at the affair included the Misses Helen Boyer, Mary Stover, Marjorie Sheehy and Mrs. Ruth Goff.

Hostesses at the party were Mrs. Ann Skinner and Esther Schuchmann. Bridge was played as the diversion, and prizes were awarded to Miss Sheehy and Mrs. Louise Beal.

Hostesses for the April 6 meeting will be Mrs. Beal and Mrs. Marie Andregg.

Philomathians Meet With Mrs. Cummins

Mrs. Otis Cummins, Coleman road, was hostess Wednesday night to members of the Philomathian club, when Mrs. W. W. Grant presented a round table discussion on "Post War Problems."

Three members participating in the discussion were Mrs. M. K. Leggett, Miss Barbara Hartman and Mrs. Vernon Fay.

One guest present at the meeting was Mrs. N. S. White. Refreshments were served by the hostess. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. C. P. Siegenthaler. At that time, there will be a social program.

EGG HUNT'S WAR VICTIM

MIDDLETOWN — (AP) — Middletown's annual Easter egg hunt in Arden park, which regularly attracts some 10,000 persons, has become a war casualty. Abandonment of the annual children's frolic was attributed to the need for gasoline and rubber conservation as well as to the present importance of eggs as a vital food commodity.

HIGHWAYS DISCUSSED AT SOROSIS MEETING.

Mrs. A. H. Moellenkamp Presents Topic for Members of Beta Chapter of Sorosis; Mrs. Dorothy Moser Is Hostess.

THE PAN AMERICAN HIGHWAY was the theme of the Beta chapter of Mansfield Sorosis, Wednesday night, when members met at the home of Miss Dorothy Moser, 56 Greenwood avenue. The topic was presented by Mrs. A. H. Moellenkamp, who had charge of the program.

Mrs. Elden Lash, president, presided at the business meeting. Mrs. V. Simpson reported that the club had participated 100 per cent in the victory book campaign.

Mrs. Moellenkamp painted a beautiful picture of the Pan American highway as it links with the main highways of the United States and into Canada to the new Alcan highway to Alaska.

The routes of both the Pan American and the Alcan highways were traced, with the use of a map, by Mrs. Moellenkamp. She told the romantic story of a young school teacher from South Carolina, who was the first white man to penetrate the 300 miles of the jungle land of the upper end of the future Pan American highway.

The words, according to Mrs. Moellenkamp, that were used to plan the highway were "neighborly," "trade" and "travel." Its two-fold purpose for being built was purely for the protection of the two Americas and for the transportation either way for produce.

The speaker named the products imported and exported from the two countries, and stated that the highway will become America's Burma road if soon finished.

She described geographically the lay of the land as the highway passes through each country in South America. She presented the story of the rapid building of the Alcan highway, which had its formal opening Nov. 30, 1942. Her talk was brought to a close with the statement that it took a war to make a dream of this road a reality.

Mrs. Stuart Baird, Crescent road, will entertain in two weeks with Mrs. Harold Mansfield in charge of the program.

Solving Parent Problems.

Q. My little boy, three, seems to be very bright. After he hears a story or poem read a few times he can give it word for word. My friends marvel at what he says, knows and does. What advice have you for his best home education?

A. Avoid talking of his achievements, even in his absence. Never act toward him as if you supposed he were unusual. Induce your close friends to cooperate. What he needs most to learn is proper humility, lest he grow up a prig. Keep on reading to him. Encourage him to color, draw, and make things alone and with other children his age and to engage in the rough-and-tumble of the neighborhood playground, settling his own quarrels and fighting his own battles.

HOROSCOPE

For Friday, March 19.

This day may be memorable for a swift and sudden reversal, with a deep-rooted and unforeseen spading up of old conditions. Such a radical visitation may offer a surprising chance to put over a coup, a stupendous effort in some cherished direction. The quick grasp of a strategic situation may have public or group approval.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of unusual circumstances in which exceptional ability, intuition, or curious talents will be successful factors. Charm may be utilized effectively.

A child born on this day may be endowed with creative talents, in which subtlety and shrewdness will be helped by imagination and originality.

"The Authority on Authorities"

NOT REALLY A RISK

Some plays which look risky are not hazardous at all. When you know a certain one by you will tip off the opponent to what you probably hold and virtually compel him to follow a plan which will win for him, anything you do is of no particular cost. If the use of a high honor may make him think you lack a certain lower one, he may play your partner for that card and consequently enable you to win with yours. If the effort to fool him doesn't work, you probably will find you got the same result as if you had not made your try, but no worse.

West took his tops in clubs and before leading a third one decided what he would do later on, so that under study later could not spoil his situation. He saw a possible trick if East had the heart K, but it would have been expected almost too much to count on him for the Q also. Hence West decided now to try for another trick himself.

After ruffing the third club, South led his spade 7. West promptly threw on the Q—quite clearly a singleton, or at least so it looked to South. The declarer's original intention had been to win the first spade round with the A and finesse the J next. West knew that if he put the 10 on the first trick. South might count him for a doubleton Q and drop it with the K on the second round—as the declarer later said he would have done.

Playing the Q, however, made the declarer decide that East had four headed by the 10, and that therefore a finesse of the 9 was necessary. A more careful declarer would have used the K on the second round, to re-enter dummy to finesse the 9 on the third. But such a thoroughly marked finesse tempted him and he finessed the 9 on the second round. As a consequence, the 10 won, making the third trick for the defense, and the later sure trick with the heart K beat the contract.

Well Chosen Clothes May Help Plumpies

By MME. QUI VIVE

We fancy that some of our pretty plumpies deceive themselves about the true state of their figures. They do that to postpone the fatal day when they must start the reducing campaigns. "The bath room scale reports that I am overweight," they tell themselves, "but after all, I don't look it. I feel well, so why bother? When I find that I must get y dresses one size larger, I'll know I'm in for it. Until then—what the heck?"

For such weak-hearted sisters we have no sympathy at all. Excess weight slows up activities, is a health menace. There is no sense in tolerating it. If diet and exercise do not bring a slender silhouette, a physician should be consulted to find out if the source of expansion is a glandular disturbance. That happens sometimes, but not often. In nearly all cases here has been over-indulgence in good chow, under-indulgence in muscular activity.

At any rate, a woman can make herself look thinner by the lines and colors of her dress. This subject she should find interesting. She will pursue it unless she is set in her ways. The hopeless one is the dear lady who believes she can "wear anything" and look well. She sees a cute little high school slimp in a short plaid skirt and a sweater, gets herself into the same kind of an outfit and oh, what disastrous results!

Fabrics of large patterns add to the appearance of bulk, plaids especially. The sweater is not only a revealer, it is an exaggerator, especially if it is not a loose fit. Improperly cut skirts and those that are snug make hips look larger. If the neck is short and the jaw line full, the round cut at the neck line will make matters worse, while the extended V will be a figure deflater.

If the upper arms are heavy never wear a sleeveless formal. Why display an anatomical defect? The same is true when the back is cut low and a roll of fat, foolishly referred to as the dowager's hump, is right there in the public eye.

Dark colors, especially black, are favorable. Bright colors like red and strong blues, make a woman look inches bigger. Long lines are flattering as are soft flowing draperies. This idea may never have been presented to the woman with spreading hips and fattened calves who wears a skirt that is scarcely more than a kilt. Why do they do it?

Tape measures don't lie. If yours reports an added inch to the waistline, cut down on food elements that build adipose tissues—fats, sweets and starches—and put your mind on the subject of flattering apparel.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)
By ADELE GARRISON

I looked at Philip Veritzen with covert amazement, imbued strongly with resentment, for something in his voice had stirred unpleasant old memories. I remembered that his obsession for uniting his son Noel with royalty by marriage, to give the boy the status of which a bar-sinister ancestry had deprived the father, had brought Philip Veritzen to the brink of insanity.

Now, with his own wounded pride healed by winning a royal wife, exiled Queen Olga of Transylvania, and with Noel's marriage to Mary long since forgiven or even approved, it seemed impossible that any long-hidden embers of that old conflagration could remain. Yet a certain nuance in his voice had stirred my alarm.

It was the irony of fate, I reflected, that in the old days Philip Veritzen had used every possible device to throw Georges and Mary together, so that Noel might turn to Olga, while now he seemingly presented the possibility of Georges being dazzled by Mary. "If you were a woman, my Philip," Olga said softly, "I should be tempted to imitate Mary and say 'Miam, miamu,' to you."

"Of course you know I was only jesting," he said. "Mary undoubtedly had very good reason for the delay, although I do not approve of either her or Noel keeping you waiting."

Dicky Arrives.

"I trust you are jesting again," Olga said, but there was a knock at the door and Philip went at once to admit Dicky, who looked unusually handsome, with no trace of fatigue from his long and tedious journey to Weirhampton.

"Mary and Noel will be over shortly," Dicky told Olga. "Mary asked me to present their apologies and say they were unavoidably detained at the theater."

"Of course I knew they had some good reason," she said serenely, then Dicky managed to maneuver himself and me into a position where we could talk unnoticed.

"What's eating Mary?" he asked, prison fashion.

"Why?" I breathed.

"Because she looks like the devil, in the most gosh-awful dress I've seen in many a long day, and I don't believe she's well. She looks mighty queer to me. Give her the once-over when she comes in, will you, and see what you think. You probably can figure out what's the matter and apply the remedy."

There was acute concern in Dicky's voice, for he is exceedingly fond of his winsome niece who, with her three brothers, has been our charge since the death of her parents.

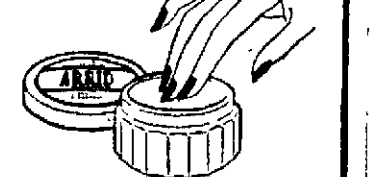

There was something heart-warming, too, in his complimentary assumption that all I had to

N THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

WASHINGTON—There is another angle to the question of manpower. Can we afford to waste medical skill when it is so limited?

Many communities have been stripped of their physicians. Yet it is not enough. The war department announces that 9,000 more physicians must be taken from civilian life this year. Approximately a third of them will be used as internes and hospital residents.

In California, a friend of mine recently visited an army hospital. Only a portion of the beds were occupied. My friend found on duty there a prominent child specialist serving now as a major in the army medical corps. He was putting in a very light day's work largely in an administrative capacity around the hospital.

Yet in the small town nearby there is not a single physician left. Under army regulations the residents cannot be treated at the military hospital, although it has the most modern x-ray and other equipment standing idle much of the time and a staff of fine physicians with little to do. Some of them would not only be glad to handle obstetrical cases in that nearby community in order to keep themselves in training for a return to civilian practice, but this would be needed service to the community.

However, there may be sound reasons for the regulations and I am not arguing that so much. I am asking questions as to whether we are making the best use of our medical skill in this emergency.

Here is one question about women doctors. The military needs 9,000 physicians this year. But not single one of them will be a woman doctor. Yet there are eight thousand women physicians and surgeons in the country.

Secretary of War Stimson has a niece, Dr. Barbara Stimson, who is an orthopedic surgeon. She went into the British medical corps and was pro-

FAIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

KANSAS CITY—Well, what shall we take up next in the story of Harold Franklin, the engineer of the gravy train? He is the son of the president of the boiler-makers' union and agent in a group-insurance deal which yields him commissions up to 15 per cent in various types of coverages on the members and their families, most of them compulsory.

Shall we try to reckon how much the son of the union president is getting out of the compulsory insurance that is shoved onto the shoulders of the shipyarders as a condition of their employment? or shall we prove that they lie at the union headquarters in Kansas City, Kan., when they say the kid is not getting and never did get a rakeoff on the premiums?

I guess we will do a little speculating on the rakeoff to Harold Franklin, the old man's son. These union families, by the way, are building up quite an aristocracy. This Franklin does very well. John Lewis' daughter and his brother,anny, are way up in the chips in the unionizing business; the son of Bill Hutcheson, the president of the carpenters, is vice president under him in next line if anything happens to the father; in Washington, John Moreschi, the son of old Ed, the president of the great shakedown called common laborers union, has been taken care of with a nice job around the national headquarters of the shake.

Assuming that the boiler-makers' union now has 6,000 members, which is not an extravagant figure, although the actual number is not publicly known, the premiums at $15 a year would amount to $90,000. For this the workers on the war jobs the shipyarders and other plants get death guarantees of from $333.33 to $1,000. Most of them now are covered for less than $1,000 because they have been members less than two years. They so are covered from $666 to $2,000 in case of death by occupational accident and for $500 to $1,000 for partial disability.

On new policies young Franklin and his partner, Jerome Koehler, also of Kansas City, Kan., take a commission of 6 per cent of the $15 annual premium. On the premiums of all members of more than one year's standing their commission is 4 per cent. Franklin gets two-thirds and Koehler one-third of the gravy from the 6 per cent premiums and the 4 per cent commissions they

BROWN CANCELS OPA ATTORNEY'S POWER OF VETO

Lawyers Will Give Advice Only In Move To Speed Up Operations.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown's efforts to put price control and rationing on a "practical, business-like" basis resulted today in an order canceling the virtual "veto power" which the OPA attorneys have exercised heretofore over the agency's actions.

A high OPA official made it clear that Brown's memorandum to all OPA deputy and regional administrators relegates the hundreds of attorneys in the organization, both in Washington and throughout the country, to the status of legal counsel.

They are no longer to wield the authority which they once exercised on policy matters, the official said.

Brown's order stipulated that the legal staff shall perform its "essential function" of preparing OPA's administrative regulations in the correct legal form and seeing to it that they conform to constitutional and statutory requirements of the price-control act.

However, it vested in deputy and regional operating officials full responsibility for making decisions on price-control and rationing measures and authorized them to go ahead even in the face of objections from the legal staff, which in the past have proven a stiff obstacle to policy decisions.

The OPA official, interpreting the memorandum, said that it would greatly speed up action on hundreds of appeals and requests from the field for rulings on particular points involved in OPA regulations, issues raised by trade, business and industrial circles.

"The administrative officers will be able to render quick, clean-cut decisions in such cases," he said. "There will not be a prolonged debate between administrators and the legal staff while the patient dies."

In this vein, Brown's order asserted that OPA is "an essential part of the national war program" and "it is absolutely essential that OPA action be prompt and decisive."

BURIAL HERE

L. P. Schnitzer, Ex-Mansfield Resident, Succumbs.

Lawrence P. Schnitzer, 45, member of a pioneer Mansfield family, died at his home, 1302 West 116th street, Cleveland, Monday after two months' illness. Burial will be in Mansfield Catholic cemetery Friday at 1 p. m., following a service to be held at 9 a. m. in St. Rose church, Cleveland.

Mr. Schnitzer was born in Mansfield, Sept. 5, 1897 and was a grandson of the late Ferdinand F. Schnitzer, who was supervising architect during construction of the Ohio State reformatory here. His father, the late Edward Schnitzer, was engaged in the cigar making trade here for many years. The family moved to Cleveland 25 years ago.

Lawrence was educated in St. Peter's Catholic school and was a News carrier for four years during his school days.

He is survived by his wife and one son, Robert, also by his mother, Mrs. Mary Schnitzer, and one brother, Edward. A sister, Marie, died three years ago.

LIFTS BAN ON PLEASURE RIDES

But OPA Cuts 'A' Ration of Gasoline In Half In Eastern States.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Eastern motorists will be rid of the pleasure driving ban next Monday but their basic gasoline rations have been cut in half to limit non-occupational motoring to 90 miles a month.

The present "A" ration in eastern states is 21 gallons for a two-month period, based on the use of eight coupons valued at three gallons each. Under the new system, the same eight coupons will be used. The coupon value remains the same, but "A" card holders will have to stretch their allotment over four months instead of two.

After next Monday, when A-5 coupons become valid, "A" card holders can use the reduced amount of gasoline available to them for family or personal necessity driving such as essential shopping, meeting family emergencies, trips to the doctor, and so forth. Car owners who have been using "A" books for going to work in connection with work now will become eligible for supplemental rations. Details of that procedure will be announced within a few days.

Lifting of the pleasure driving ban, which was begun on Jan. 7, was announced by the office of price administration.

The saving of 30,000 barrels of gasoline daily under the pleasure driving ban is preserved by the new cut in basic rations, it was announced. Mileage remaining under the reduced value of the "A" card will not be controlled.

SINKING PROBE REPORT SECRET

Testimony on Accident Which Cost 32 Seamen's Lives Sent To Washington.

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND—The report of a coast guard board of inquiry into the Lake Erie disaster of last Dec. 2 when 32 seamen lost their lives in the sinkings of the oil barge Clevecon and its tug, the Admiral, was sent to Washington before the recommendation and findings will be made public.

The hearing was concluded yesterday with testimony by Lieut. Commander W. E. Schweitzer, commanding officer of the coast guard cutter Ossipee, that the storm of last Dec. 2 was so severe the Clevecon was under observation only 15 minutes.

He declared the period during which the barge could be seen afforded too brief a time to stretch a rescue line to the Clevecon and to pull its 18 men, one by one, through the water to the Ossipee.

Ensign John A. Hanninen, the cutter's desk officer, said the ship got within 150 yards of the ill-fated barge but icy weather prevented rescue of the crewmen. The officer also asserted heavy weather and fast-forming ice prevented launching of the Ossipee's lifeboats, damaged her directional antenna and put her gyrocompass out of operation.

Alpha Pi Delta Girls 'Joined'

By Horse Rushee

BERKELEY, Cal. (AP)—The Alpha Delta Pi girls are pretty select about whom they admit to their group. That's why they were at a loss today to explain how a horse got into their sorority house on the University of California campus.

Hearing a noise in the living room, they paid little attention at first, thinking perhaps one of the girls was practicing a tap dance routine. It was a "girl" all right—a bay mare—as Mrs. Gladys Hall, house mother, found when she peeped in.

Mrs. Hall called the Berkeley pound master and the "rushee" was rushed out of the house and impounded by the city. No one has claimed the horse.

FORMER PAVONIA RESIDENT DIES

Charles S. Tucker Dies Following Industrial Accident.

Word was received here today of the death last night of Charles S. Tucker, 46, former resident of the Pavonia community, who died after an industrial accident at Springdale, Pa., where he had resided since leaving Richland county 25 years ago.

He is survived by his widow and two children; his mother, Mrs. T. V. Smith of Galion; a sister, Mrs. Carl Rettig, of Galion; and six brothers, Howard and Floyd of Galion, Earl of Weller township, Henry and Ray of Ashland, and John Tucker serving in the armed forces.

Funeral services are to be conducted at 1:30 Sunday in Springdale.

UNDERGOES OPERATION

NEW LONDON—Critically injured when attacked by an angry boar at his farm near New London two weeks ago, Earl Kirkpatrick, 61, underwent an operation yesterday to correct a nerve condition in his side at Huron hospital in Cleveland. His condition was reported favorable today.

SENATE REVOLT LEAVES LABOR BILL STRANDED

13 Republicans Walk Out of Caucus on Length of Child, Woman Work Week.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—Proposed legislation to increase the working hours of women and minors was left stranded today by an uprising of 13 Republicans in the Ohio senate.

The 13, insisting on a 48-hour week, refused to go along with the bill's 32-hour provision, and the measure was shunted back to the rules committee.

Some of the proponents declared privately that so far as they were concerned the bill could stay in committee.

The Republican leadership, fearing defeat of the proposal, withdrew their plans for a vote yesterday. Senate Republican Leader Frank E. Whitmore of Akron reflected the proponents' exasperation over the turn of events when he said:

"We have worked hard on this bill. Now, if somebody else can bring out a better bill, let them do it."

Other senators were hopeful, however, that the governor's office—which had endorsed the bill—would help restore harmony among the Republicans, who control the senate. Gov. John W. Bricker was in Cincinnati when the rebellion occurred.

The rupture developed at a caucus of the Republican members, held behind closed doors to sound out sentiment preceding the senate's scheduled vote.

After the members had debated the bill nearly two hours, Sen. Joseph I. Ross (R-Montgomery), its author, proposed an amendment to fix a 48-hour maximum for women and minors. Present law sets a limit of 45 hours for factories and 48 for most other industries.

The caucusing senators tied 13 to 13 on Ross' amendment. At least 22 votes would have been required to pass the bill on the senate floor.

Sen. Lawrence A. Kane (R-Hamilton) proposed that the Republicans express their opinions, in a sample ballot, on the original bill, and that every one in the caucus be bound by the decision. Thereupon the 13 advocates of a 48-hour week left the room, and the senate, which had been in recess, adjourned for the day.

The 13 were identified by a caucus participant as Senators Ross, L. E. Baker of Montgomery county, Raymond H. Burke of Butler, Virgil E. Cramer and Raymond E. Hildebrand of Lucas, James A. Jones of Portage, D. A. Liggitt of Logan, Stanley Mechem of Athens, Walter G. Nickels of Tuscarawas, Robert A. Pollock of Stark, P. H. Rogers of Lorain, Carl D. Sheppard of Summit, and John Stephenson of Columbiana.
